Ellwood bars four key gridgers from team

By MIKE CHERRY

JEFF ANDERSON
Sports Writer

It's over. The mounting controversy surrounding the indefinite suspension of four senior MU football players climaxed Thursday when head coach Frank Ellwood announced the players would not be allowed to rejoin the team.

Ellwood had two reasons for his decision concerning Mike Bailey, Bud Nelson, C.W. Geiger and Ray Crisp. "In making a difficult decision, I tried to weigh many factors and accept as much input as possible," Ellwood said. "In the end, the key factor was the present team and our remaining games."

The four players had been indefinitely suspended last week after missing several practice sessions. All missed Saturday's game at Kent State. Also last week, Crisp announced that he quit the team.

"On Tuesday, all four players came to Ellwood and asked to be reinstated. They all came in together and said they'd like to be reconsidered for the team," Ellwood said.

"I made the decision on my own," Ellwood said. "The only other input I had in the decision came from my coaching staff and the opinions of the upperclassmen on the team."

The players were suspended Oct. 17. Ellwood said he waited nine days to make a decision because it was not one that should be rushed. "I didn't want to make a rash decision that I'd have to regret later," Ellwood said.

Ellwood said he would not request that the players' scholarships be taken away. "They have given us three-and-a-half-years," Ellwood said. "I cannot forget that."

Geiger, who transferred to MU from Michigan State, is the only one who is not a four-year player at Marshall.

"As far as I'm concerned it is a dead issue," Ellwood said. "Our main concern is this week's game against Furman. As to how this will affect the team, we'll have to see on Saturday."

"As for the players themselves, I have no animosity toward them," Ellwood said. "The four players said they did not have any animosity toward the team or Ellwood."

"A decision is a decision, and it's been made," Nelson said. "There have never been any hard feelings between players and coaches. If there are any hard feelings, they're on the coaches' part, not ours."

Nelson said he is still supporting the Herd. "As far as I'm concerned, I am Marshall's number one fan and behind them 100 percent," he said. "However, if I had it to do again, I'd do the same thing."

Bailey also said he had no hard feelings. "He (Ellwood) did what he had to do," he said. "He made the decision, it was up to him."

"I felt he was right in his decision, but I was right in my decision also," Bailey continued. "I'd like to be back on the team. I never wanted off. I like being out on the field playing ball."

"That's the only regret I have — that I won't be on the field for the last four games," Bailey said.

Crisp also said he wished he could play the rest of the season. "I'll be at the game Saturday," he said. "I hope the team wins. I just wish I was out there helping them."

"I didn't think it would turn out like this," Crisp said. "I just didn't know what the outcome was going to be. I have no bad feelings toward the team."

When asked if he would do anything different if he had it to do over again, Crisp said he would give it more thought before making a decision.

Geiger said he would have used another method of protest if he could do it over. "Coach Ellwood had to make a decision, but so did I," Geiger said. "Right or wrong, I have to stick by that decision."

Of four team members interviewed, three agreed with Ellwood's decision. The fourth, senior tackle Joey Brison, declined to comment.

"Right or wrong, the team needs discipline," sophomore linebacker Mark Bar-toe said. "If players think they can get by with anything, there will not be any discipline."

Jim Johnson, junior defensive tackle, said he would like to see the players back. "We'll miss them, there's no doubt about that. You can't really say that their absence will hurt us, because we did as well, if not better, against Kent State as we had all year," Johnson said.

"But what would you do if you were the coach? Personally, I think it was a little selfish on their parts. Maybe it will hurt, maybe not. Time will tell."

Kevin Smith, junior safety, said he doesn't feel that the situation is going to hurt the team. "Personally, I would like to see them back, but we have to accept what the coach did. He's the head man, it's not up to the team," Smith said. "I know it's not going to affect my play, I'm just going out and do the best I can, and not let this thing hurt me. All year long, Ellwood has been stressing team unity. That's what we have to have."

Marshall President Robert B. Hayes said the situation was strictly a football matter. "I'm concerned anytime young men are unable to fulfill their desires," he said. "However, discipline on a team is a sensitive matter and it has got to be a coach's decision."

Chairman indicted in mail fraud case

By JEFF ANDERSON
Staff Writer

The chairman of pathology at Marshall's School of Medicine was indicted Wednesday on two charges of mail fraud by a federal court in Memphis, Tenn.

Dr. Leonard B. Victor and his wife, Rona, have been accused of fraudulently using the mail and securities to defraud the State Street Bank and its sister firm, Boston Financial Data Service Inc. of Boston, of more than $400,000. The money was erroneously placed into the bank account of the couple's daughter, Sarah Ruth Victor.

The indictment stems from a civil suit filed by the bank last May, saying a clerical error caused Sarah Victor's bank account to be credited with $400,000 in shares from the Rowe-Price New Horizon Fund Inc. The original suit was settled out of court and the terms were not released.

Officials at the bank said the shares were intended for the account of a Texas firm whose account number was one digit different from Sarah Victor's account.

U.S. District Judge Bailey Brown ordered arrest warrants Wednesday for the Victor couple and released them on their own recognizance.

Victor came to Marshall last August to head the pathology department for the new medical school. He was a former member of the clinical laboratory staff at the University of Tennessee Center for the Health Sciences in Memphis.

Victor was brought to Marshall by Medical School Dean Robert W. Coon. "I had received only the highest recommendations from people whom I have known and trusted for a great deal of time," Coon said.

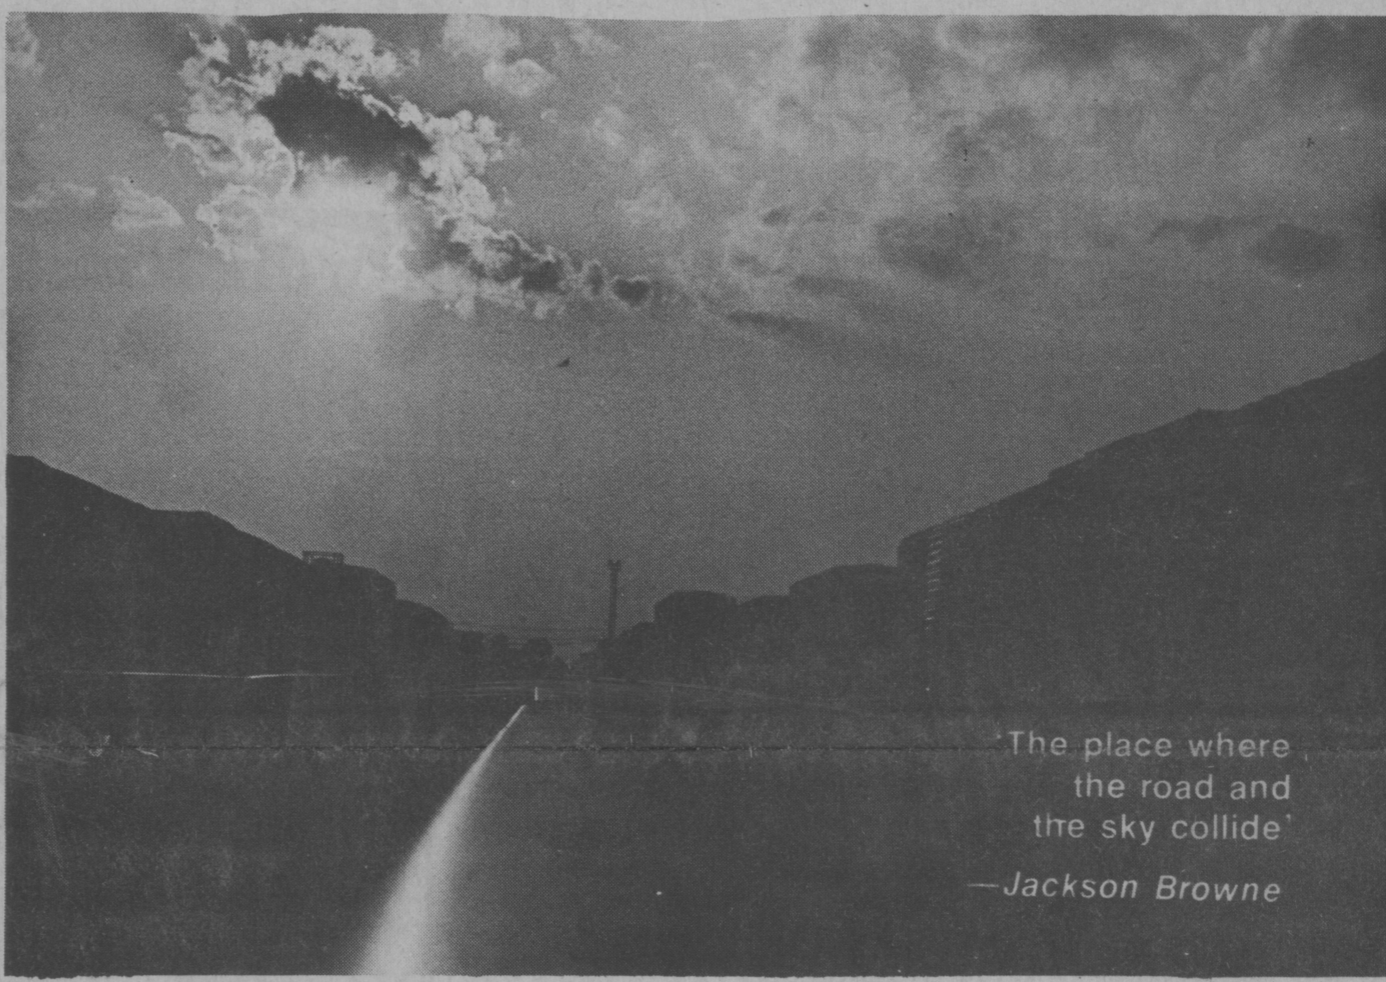

Coon added that he did not know Victor prior to his arrival at Marshall. "Frankly, I do not fully understand the indictment. I was under the impression that the entire matter was settled. I'm not aware of the situation that exists," Coon said. "My personal view is that he has not had his day in court yet, so I don't think he is guilty of anything yet. I can't see where there will be any kind of a case against him."

Coon pointed out that only a small percentage of indictments end up in convictions.

"Dr. Victor has not been convicted of anything as of yet. His guilt or innocence will be brought out in our judicial system," Coon said. "The only thing we have so far is an allegation."

Coon said he has not even given the matter of a replacement for Victor any thought.

"Why should I?" Coon asked. "As far as I'm concerned, he is not guilty of anything yet." Coon also said he believes that the indictments will have no lasting effect on the image of the School of Medicine. "We will just have to wait and see what comes out of the courts," Coon said.

Railroad ramblings

This scene at a local railroad yard seems to epitomize the phrase referred to by singer-songwriter Jackson Browne. A single, glistening rail surrounded by vacant boxcars fades into the panorama — a site sending any lonely vagabond's mind ramblin'. And the contrast of the bright sun and dark, cloudy sky embodies the scene with its stark yet reflective majesty. The photographer used a special lens filter to capture this tranquil vista.

Aid plan praised by Fisher

By TOM GALVIN
Reporter

Middle income families can now breathe a sigh of relief.

The 95th Congress — in its closing minutes — passed the Middle Income Student Assistance Act, now on its way to President Carter.

Carter has been quoted by wire service as supporting the bill.

"This is a very positive move," said Dr. Richard G. Fisher, vice president/dean of student affairs.

"We supported this act from the beginning, it will serve more of Marshall students," said President Robert B. Hayes.

The act takes the major federal collegiate aid programs—all aimed originally at the poor—and expands them to the non-poor, at a cost of $1.5 billion to the federal treasury.

Outright grants will be available to students whose families earn up to $25,000 and in some cases even more.

"This act really meets the needs of some of the students and if you have more than one student in college the amount of money will be increased," said Fisher.

After the House killed tuition tax credits by refusing to compromise with the Senate, the Middle Income Student Assistance Act popped up and whisked through the House on a voice vote, according to the wire service.

U.S. Education Commissioner Ernest L. Boyer called the legislation "the most dramatic move in the history of this country to help the children of the middle class get into college."

Fisher said one of the good things about the act is it "gives the money directly to the students and takes a complete look at the total cost of a student paying to go to college."

"The tax credit bill got all the publicity but the Middle Income Act did not," Fisher said. "I really was not surprised when the Middle Income Act passed and the Tax Credit Bill did not. We knew the Middle Income Act was the act that would meet the needs of the students," he added.

"The middle income people have been hurt before. Now this act will help them," Hayes said. "I am not concerned about the upper class, but I am concerned about these people," he added.

"The President has been supporting this act since it started," Hayes said. He added that he did not think the tuition credit bill which was defeated met the needs of the students.

Beginning in the 1979-80 school year no strings grants ranging from $200 to $1,800 will be available to students from families with incomes up to $25,000. Right now eligibility is cut off at $16,000, according to the wire service.

Even a family with a $40,000 income would be eligible under certain federal circumstances, the wire service said.

Faculty petition urges credit/no credit review

By CINDY MARTIN
Staff Writer

Ten faculty members have submitted a petition requesting the Academic Planning and Standards Committee reconsider its recommendations regarding the credit/no credit grading system.

Dr. Robert Alexander, chairman of the department of management and a committee member, said he presented the petition and an accompanying letter to committee chairman Giovanna B. Morton. Alexander had previously voiced objections to the committee's recommendations.

The proposed changes would require students taking a class on the credit/no credit system to make a minimum grade of 'C' to pass the course.

Alexander said the faculty signatures are from several departments and are "widely representative of the university as a whole."

Alexander said that the accompanying letter repeated questions he previously raised regarding the committee's recommendation. "I still believe there would be possible legal implications involved if the recommendation were put into effect. Students taking a course on the regular grading system would receive credit for a class if they got a 'D' grade. However, students using the credit/no credit system would receive no credit if they made a 'D'," he said.

"I also think the committee did not have adequate justification for its recommendation," he added. "It based its decision on a letter from one faculty member, and committee members kept saying the recommendation had to be made now, in order to get it into the catalog."

Alexander noted several items in the faculty member's letter the committee received before making its decision. He said the faculty member complained that one-third of the students in one of his classes were taking the course on the credit/no credit system. According to Alexander, the letter also mentioned that one student was taking the class for the third time on the credit/no credit system.

Alexander said the faculty member noted that with such a situation the professor generally assumes he is teaching a poor class and lowers his standards accordingly.

Students may only take 18 hours on the credit/no credit system. However, Alexander said the faculty member said many students take classes on that basis until they acquire 18 hours. At that point, the letter read, the students must return to the real world of success or failure.

Alexander said the letter also questioned the number of summa cum laude graduates who have accumulated 18 hours of grades based on the credit/no credit system.

According to Alexander, "The letter's overtones were that only poor students take classes on the credit/no credit system. The committee assumed this also. I still question that decision."

Alexander said he believes the committee needed to conduct a study of the situation before it made its recommendation. "I believe the committee needs to have the type of data which will enable it to study the number and type of students taking classes on the credit/no credit system."

He said he also anticipated the student opposition the recommendation has raised. "I think the student protests and our petition will cause the committee to take note of it's actions," he said.

More than 1,700 students have signed Student Government petitions recommending the university administration not accept the committee's proposed changes, according to Student Body President Ed Hamrick. The student petitions also ask that a two-to-four week evaluation period be established to enable students to attend classes before deciding on the credit/no credit option.

Hamrick said he plans to present the petitions to Marshall President Robert B. Hayes today.

Socialist candidate campaigns for working conditions

By TAMMY HUFFMAN
Reporter

Human needs before corporate profit is the campaign policy of Rosalinda Flint, a West Virginia Senate candidate on the socialist ticket.

"Our campaign is challenging the corporations by saying that the safety of miners and other workers in the state should be considered first," explained Flint.

Safe working conditions must no longer be sacrificed to the company's speed-up schemes, she said.

The recent deaths of 51 workers of Willow Island and continuing coal mine disasters make it more urgent than ever before that all government safety laws be strictly enforced by the workers themselves, Flint said.

"I feel that the corporation should be jailed for the murder of 51 people," Flint said.

Heavy fines and/or long jail sentences should be imposed on all employers who violate government safety laws, Flint commented.

A labor party would fight for nationalization of the mines taking them out of the hands of profit-hungry operators and putting them into the hands of the workers, Flint said. Then safe working conditions would be enforced by the coal miners, Flint explained.

Flint is a clerical worker in Morgantown and a member of the Laborers International Union Local 840.

A former steelworker, she helped organize support for both the 1974 and 1977-1978 coal strikes, according to Don Patton, vice president of the Graduate Student Association. She spoke to that group Thursday in Memorial Student Center.

On April 4 she announced her candidacy for U.S. Senate — the first socialist candidate in West Virginia for that office since 1936.

The official unemployment rate is more than six percent, and this means six million people are without work in the country, Flint said.

An emergency public works program should be launched to build much needed housing, schools, mass transportation, and so forth to give people the jobs they need, explained Flint.

The huge sum needed to pay for these programs should come from eliminating the $126 billion war budget, cutting out money for wars and war armaments to support dictatorships from South Africa to Chile, Flint said.

"Why is it that the country which is the richest in all the world can't meet the necessary jobs or incomes for all?" she asked.

Abolish all sales taxes including the new taxes on alcohol, tobacco, and gasoline, she recommended. Housing, medical care, and schools are more important than corporate super profits, Flint said.

Incomes less than $30,000 should not be taxed, and a 100 percent tax should be imposed on incomes more than $50,000, she added.

The most effective way to fight for our rights is through massive independent action, strikes and demonstrations, Flint said. The corporations have their own politicians and their parties—the Democratic and Republican, she commented.

Working people need a party of their own and independent labor parties based on a democratic and revitalized union movement, Flint explained.

A labor party would champion the struggles of working people, blacks, women and students, she asserted, saying it could lead the battles against the industrial giants on the picket line and in the electoral arena. A labor party could lead a fight to open the books of the big corporations to reveal for everyone to see the real profits of these huge mass monopolies, Flint commented.

Freeze and Fry

Harris temperature unpleasant

For an institution of higher learning, Marshall apparently has turned a very cold shoulder on one of the basic tools of education — the classroom.

Conditions in Harris Hall, the university's newest academic structure, constitute a frigid farce of physical plant follies. Supposedly a showcase of Marshall's heralded expansion, the building currently offers all the comforts of an igloo to shivering night class victims.

And this frosty foolishness hasn't been the only environmental dilemma encountered in the building this semester. Earlier, air conditioning system shutdowns left students stewing in Indian summer heat.

Despite student complaints and a bitter letter from an irate department chairman, the hellish heat continued. And even recent cooler weather hasn't alleviated Harris Hall's climate control chaos.

Teeth now chatter and sweaters are piled upon sweaters because of Harris Hall's algid atmosphere — an inexcusable condition that is detrimental to instructors and students alike.

The indefatigable journalist
by Ken Smith,
Editor

Perhaps Marshall is mired in budgetary woes. Perhaps attention is needed in other vital areas and programs. Perhaps cutbacks must be made in some aspects of the university's physical operations to counteract escalating maintenance costs. Perhaps...nothing.

Marshall students come to Huntington for a singular purpose — education. Football games, concerts, exhibits and other activities are a part of this learning process. Yet the primary educational experience invariably occurs in one place — the classroom.

Proper upkeep of Marshall's academic buildings is an unavoidable prerequisite to university operation. Even though maintenance crews must police a growing campus that is beset with the pangs of expansion, classrooms must receive priority.

Perspiration, shivers and heavy overcoats do not aid academic decorum. In the fluctuating freeze/fry Harris Hall environment, education becomes a ludicrous exercise in endurance and fortitude.

Such physical abuse cannot be tolerated. University officials must not deny students what most people take for granted — a comfortable living and learning setting.

For despite Marshall's expansion, it must never neglect to look within...to the needs of its students.

Who killed the English language? Poor education, media to blame

It's very easy to make an idiot of yourself when you attempt to put your thoughts down on paper each week.

You check with a colleague instead of checking a dictionary, and emanate becomes eminate. A thoughtless typing mistake transforms principal into principle.

But who notices such mistakes? Unfortunately, most people around Marshall don't. Unfortunately, most people around Marshall abuse and misuse the English language nearly every time they speak or write.

And even more unfortunately, many of those people are journalists.

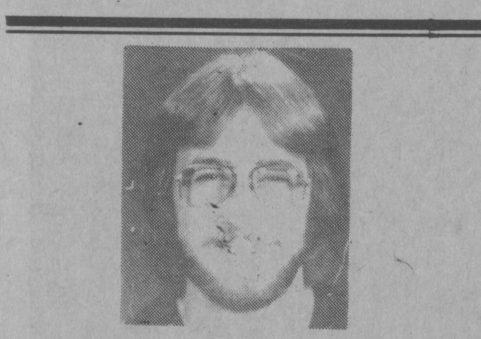

A reporter's writing appears before the public every day. That public sees the reporter's words and sentences in print, and whether consciously or subconsciously, they assume that if it's in the paper it must be correct.

Of course, these people never have had the opportunity to work on a newspaper and see how the language is slaughtered.

They never see how reporters and editors ignore the subjunctive mood. They never see how reporters and editors write its instead of it's. They never see how reporters and editors write "Marshall won their first game..."

They never see these until they appear in print. And by then it's too late. The damage has been done.

Abuse and ignorance of the language pervades American society. You can't turn on the radio without hearing "Anderson New-

Commentary
by Mark Paxton

comb is having their..." or "The Corps of Engineers are..." An advertisement in The Parthenon says a car lot is "open week nites."

It's bad enough when a teacher tells a class something is "somewhat more unique" — a statement which affects only the few students attending that day's session. But when a newspaper prints "if it was true," every reader who does not know the indicative, imperative and the subjunctive moods is affected.

The question here is why. Why do journalists, whose primary job is working with words, make such basic, simple mistakes?

The blame lies with the education system, a system which often places more emphasis on moving up to higher classes than on teaching or instructing. Elementary, junior high and high school teachers often don't care or don't know themselves what is correct.

But lower level educators are not the only ones to blame. As a letter in Thursday's Parthenon indicated, some journalism instructors don't even know or use correct grammar either.

The letter in question was written by an irate graduate student who happens to teach one section of Journalism 201 — the basic journalism writing course — which supposedly teaches students not only to write acceptable news stories but also to use the language correctly.

How can beginning journalists help but be misled when a published letter by their instructor makes four references to student senate by the pronouns "they," "their" and "them," accompanied by the phrase "graduate student right's brochure." How can these beginning journalists be expected to know that senate is singular and requires the pronoun "it," or that the plural of right does not take an apostrophe?

Because products of the print medium are so tangible — a radio or television broadcast is here, then gone — newspapers, more than any other media, have an obligation to provide their readers not just the news, but the news presented correctly.

And unless this presentation is correct — both factually and grammatically — the reader is not being served, but abused.

Letters

Pass/fail

In Vici Lawrence's article Pass/Fail in the October 20th edition of The Parthenon, Dr. Robert Alexander is quoted as saying that a professor who had a written letter to the Academic Planning and Standards Committee had not liked the fact that almost all of the students in his class were taking the class on the credit/no credit option. The quote further leaves the impression of something sinister in the professor's knowing that the students were taking the class credit/no credit; that he, therefore, must know each student by name; and ends by asserting sanctimoniously that such knowledge is a "violation of student rights." I am that professor and I would like to clarify a few points.

As a department chairman, Dr. Alexander surely should be aware that the Office of Institutional Research publishes a document each semester called: Undergraduate Grade Distribution. This report lists every section offered the previous semester with the number of As, Bs, Cs, Ds, Fs, Incs, Crs, and NCrs given. It takes only a second to subtract the Crs and the NCrs from the total number of registrants. Presto, the number of students who took the course on the credit/no credit option. It was on this report that I based my statement that 35 of 37 registrants took a summer course of mine a few years ago Cr/NCr and not on some devious sleuthing on my part to uncover the culprits. In the past few semesters, the totals of Crs and NCrs given in our 204 sections have averaged 50 percent. I would imagine that Dr. Alexander does not have many students in his classes on the Cr/NCr option since classes in management are not normally requirements in the core curricula. Therefore, he may not be aware of the devastating effect it can have on a class as a whole. Dr. Alexander is further quoted as wanting to see a survey of the GPA of students taking classes on the option. I understand that Dr. Westbrook's students are willing and able to conduct such a survey.

It is my contention that the credit/no credit option should be completely done away with at Marshall since it being perverted by students who only wish to manipulate it to avoid learning material which may well be of value to them in later life although they may not be able to see its potential value from their present perspective. The intent of the credit/no credit option was to allow students to explore areas which they might not normally explore owing to the danger such classes might present to their GPA. However, at Marshall it is used to avoid work and there isn't even the danger of lowering their GPA since, as in Alice in Wonderland, no one fails, he just doesn't receive credit. The student just keeps taking courses until he accumulates 18 hours of "credit."

I wonder how many students who have been graduated Summa cum laude in the past few years have 18 hours of D in the closet?

Israeli settlement decision protested

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration protested Israel's decision to expand its West Bank settlements Thursday as new doubts arose about the possibility of concluding a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel.

The American view, expressed publicly in a statement by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, was that the expansion of the settlements was "deeply disturbing."

The Israeli Cabinet voted Wednesday to spend the equivalent of about $15 million to build a reservoir and new housing in existing Israeli settlements on the West Bank.

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan defended the decision as consistent with Israeli policy and within Israel's rights.

State Department officials, speaking privately, said they were unsure whether Israel actually intended to put substantial numbers of new settlers on the West Bank, or whether the decision was a politically symbolic move to allay the opposition of conservative members of Begin's Likud coalition. These persons have objected to some aspects of the draft treaty that would end a 30-year-long state of war between Egypt and Israel.

Policeman cleaning gun accidentally shoots self

PARKERSBURG — State officials said Thursday familiarity with a tool used daily might have led a 17-year veteran of the state police force to accidentally shoot himself in the face with his .357 magnum service revolver.

The body of Cpl. Dewey Shrewsbury, 39, commander of the 12-trooper Parkersburg detachment, was found in the garage of his Elizabeth home Wednesday. Officials said he apparently was cleaning the weapon when it discharged.

Capt. D. L. Lemmon, commanding officer of the South Charleston detachment and the officer assigned to investigate, said there was nothing to suggest the death was other than an accident.

"It's never standard procedure to clean a loaded weapon," Capt. Jack Buckalew, commandant of the State Police Academy at Institute, said. "And if a trooper goes through the proper procedure before cleaning his weapon, he will know it's not loaded."

Elton gets hair, admits vanity

LONDON — Elton John, the British pop star who looked well on the way to becoming a glistening baldie, made his official bow with his new hair transplant Thursday.

Yes, there's hair there once more. No doubt about that. A bit thin, perhaps, but nevertheless it's top of the crops as far as he is concerned.

"I had the operation because I did not like being bald."

"I admit it is 100 percent vanity — and I am thrilled with the result."

Kennedy to visit state

OSAGE — Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the Senate Health Subcommittee, will hold a public hearing in Osage on Friday to determine "the quality of health care and the cost of health care in West Virginia." Kennedy's press secretary announced Thursday.

"The subcommittee will be hearing from families around the state that have particular health problems," said Tom Southwick.

The hearing, which is expected to last about 2 1/2 hours, is the first stop on a day Kennedy will devote largely to campaigning for Sen. Jennings Randolph.

Randolph is facing a tough fight in his bid for a fourth term from former Republican Gov. Arch Moore.

Kennedy will become one of several big-name Democrats to stump for Randolph, including president Carter and Vice President Mondale.

Randolph's office indicated that he also would attend the hearing.

Following the hearing, Kennedy and Randolph are scheduled to attend a luncheon for the Monongalia County Democratic Party in Morgantown.

Cabell County buys airport

The Cabell County Commission purchased an airport Thursday, paying $200,000 for Kyle Field, a private airport 10 miles northeast of Huntington.

Commission President Ted Johnson said the airport will be upgraded during the next five years and will be used as a facility for light aircraft. He said it will not compete with Huntington's Tri-State Airport.

The state is providing the bulk of the money for the 41-acre airport, the commission said.

Sometimes you have to walk through unbelievable darkness to reach the light.

Missing gridder blasts Carpenter

By JEFF ANDERSON
Sports Writer

Dave Toler has been found. The former Marshall linebacker who mysteriously disappeared earlier this week has dropped out of school and is living at home in Charleston.

Toler, who started MU's first six games, did not appear at practice this week after being moved to the second team for Saturday's Kent State game.

Toler's room in Hodges Hall was discovered empty Wednesday. He told no member of the coaching staff that he was leaving.

In a telephone interview with The Parthenon Thursday night, Toler said that he was unhappy with the treatment he received from the coaching staff.

"It was not (Marshall head coach Frank) Ellwood," Toler said. "If anyone, it had to be Coach (Carlin) Carpenter. He and I never did get along. I felt as though he had something personal against me."

"They never gave me a reason for moving me down to the second team, so I didn't feel I owed them a reason for leaving," Toler said. "They messed with my mind. Being out got me so messed up that I couldn't concentrate on school, and I just couldn't handle both things at once."

"I came to Marshall to play ball, and they weren't letting me play," he said. "Maybe I should have talked to coach Ellwood, but at the time I didn't want to talk to anyone. I just wanted to get out."

Toler said that he plans to attend West Virginia State College in Institute next semester.

Carpenter, the defensive coordinator, said he did not understand Toler's remarks. "I always thought Dave and I had a good relationship," Carpenter said. "I was never aware of any problem between us. I certainly didn't have any personal animosity toward him."

"Dave was brought in after a game where he did not perform well, and that was the reason he was moved down," Carpenter said. "That's what we do with all of the players. I judged him on his performance on the field, and that's all."

Coach suspends 20 UT-C players

By the Associated Press
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — Joe Morrison, University of Tennessee at Chattanooga football coach, suspended 20 black players indefinitely Thursday for their part in a racially-inspired boycott of a practice session.

Among those suspended were starting defensive backs Wayne Crittenden and Kenny Mitchell.

Additionally, five other black players, including offensive starters Gwain Durden and Joe Burke, will miss Saturday's game against McNeese State at Lake Charles, La. The five avoided indefinite suspension by running make-up laps early Thursday morning.

The 25 players, all but two of them on scholarship, boycotted Wednesday's practice session because, according to Mitchell, Morrison failed to keep a promise to meet with young black players to hear their grievances.

Mitchell and three other black seniors went to see Morrison Wednesday morning.

"I told all of them that Kenny would have to run and that suited everybody fine," Morrison said. "Then they gave me a list of grievances and asked if I wouldn't look into them. And I can tell you I did it immediately after I finished meeting with the players."

"Anytime a player ever misses a practice or a meeting he runs after practice," Morrison said. "We've been doing that for six years. Every player on this team understands that."

'Fowl race' runners compete in rain

Yes, there was a Turkey Trot and Goose Gallop Thursday as 40 runners ranging from ages nine to 36 trudged through the rain for distances of two and four miles over the MU campus.

Shelly Fetty, Cheryl Arnold and Chris Johnson won their respective age brackets in the two-mile Turkey Trot's women's division.

Nine-year-old Craig Case, Mark Bailey, Bob Galbreath and Reggie Spencer emerged victorious in the men's divisions.

Bailey, Cross Lanes junior, registered the lowest time in the two-mile run in 10 minutes 33 seconds.

Meanwhile in the four-mile Goose Gallop, Mike Bailey, twin brother of Mark, took the 17-25 age bracket title. John Welch won the 26-35 division and the overall championship with a 22:53 time and Ed Canterbury captured the 35-and-over bracket.

Both races will be repeated at 1:30 p.m. Sunday afternoon.

Harriers confident for last dual meet

The Marshall University cross country team's final preparation for the Southern Conference championships begins today against Ohio University at 4 p.m. at Riviera Country Club.

Coach Rod O'Donnell said the final dual meet of the season would be good for conditioning and should keep Marshall's momentum going.

The Herd is going for its 10th straight dual meet win in two years. The last loss in a dual meet came against Ohio University in 1976.

Furman last Herd hope for first conference win

By MIKE RUBEN
Sports Bureau Chief Incentive.

That's what Marshall head football coach Frank Ellwood says his team has plenty of for Saturday's game with Furman at Fairfield Stadium.

"This is our last Southern Conference game of the year and we haven't won a home game yet. That should be enough incentive for anyone. We will be mentally ready," Ellwood said.

O-F-F-E-N-S-E is the name of the game for Furman.

The Paladins rank in the top 10 nationally in total offense, averaging 394.4 yards per game, and are averaging more than 26 points per game.

Ellwood said the Paladins are known for being able to put points on the scoreboard. "We can't give up the big play."

Quarterback David Henderson leads the Paladins' potent offensive unit and has completed seven touchdown passes. Henderson has connected on 73 of 126 attempts for 1,022 yards this year.

Two runners have dominated action coming out of Furman's "I" formation backfield. Mike Glenn (512 yards on 109 carries) and Mark Stowers (448 yards on 79 carries) have accounted for eight TDs this fall.

"Furman has proved from the very start of the season that it is a good young team," Ellwood said. "We've been impressed with quarterback David Henderson. He really makes their offense go."

Spikers face road matches

The women's volleyball team faces Morris Harvey and Northern Kentucky in two away matches this weekend.

The women will play Morris Harvey in Charleston at 1 p.m. Friday. The Green Gals have defeated Morris Harvey once this season in two games at Marshall.

On Saturday Marshall travels to Northern Kentucky University. Northern Kentucky beat the MU women in two games here Oct. 24.

Both matches will be the best three out of five games because there are only two teams playing each day.

The women's record is 19-10.

and seems well-suited and comfortable within the 'I' formation.

"Last year when we played Furman, Mark Stowers was injured and couldn't play. This year, he has been healthy and provides a great one-two punch along with fullbacks Steve Bishop and Kent Woerner."

Before Marshall's game with the Paladins last season, Jimmy Kiser was Furman's quarterback. But because of injuries, he played tailback against the Herd and now is a wide receiver.

"That just shows you how versatile Furman can be with its offensive talent," said the Marshall coach.

Despite losing 20-17, Ellwood said his team's performance at Kent State last week was Marshall's best this year.

"In the second half at Kent State, our offense moved the ball very well. Danny Wright, Tim Campbell and Dave Crisp all ran well, but the main reason for our success was execution and solid blocking by the offensive line," he said.

"Last week, we did not lose a fumble or have a pass intercepted. This is a sign of improvement on offense," Ellwood added.

Marshall quarterback Danny Wright enjoyed his most productive game of the season at Kent. The sophomore from Greenup, Ky., ran for 179 yards on 32 carries. He now leads the team in yards rushing with 387 yards on 125 attempts for a 3.1 average per carry.

Joining Wright in the MU backfield will be Dave Crisp and Tim Campbell.

Wright's top receivers have been Todd Ellwood and Mike Natale.

Ellwood, Huntington junior, leads the Thundering Herd with 13 catches for 225 yards and three touchdowns.

Natale, Irwin, Pa., junior, has caught nine passes for 107 yards.

David Kirby, Milton sophomore, currently paces the Marshall defense with a team-leading 88 tackles and four fumble recoveries.

Marshall will be looking to break a six-game losing streak on the season and a nine-game skid in the Southern Conference.

Furman is in a deadlock with Appalachian State for third place in the SC standings with a 1-1 mark. The Purple Paladins have a 4-3 overall record.

Drac talk

Vampire expert to speak Monday

Howling winds. Blackening skies. A chilling shiver. An eerie feeling of being stalked by a demon who has marked you as its next victim. To natives of Transylvania, the feeling can mean only one thing: the figure of Count Dracula on his dusk-to-dawn search to quench his perpetual thirst for blood. A former citizen of the Transylvania region will be on campus Monday night to lecture and show the first ever Dracula silent film.

Dr. Leonard Wolf, English professor at San Francisco State University, and author of two books about Dracula, will speak on the curse of the vampire, its history, its folklore and its various connotations.

There will also be a slide presentation of the Count's journey through northern Europe until his death, according to a news release on the speaker.

In presenting his talk, "The Annotated Dracula," Wolf carries a small satchel which he said contains a vampire killing kit, according to Don E. Robertson, director of student activities and organizations.

Wolf is the author of "A Dream of Dracula" and "The Annotated Dracula." He recently prepared a course called "Monsters," and has published a book about the subject.

The free public lecture will be at 8 p.m. Monday in Old Main Auditorium. Admission is free to students with I.D. cards. A question-and-answer period will follow the lecture.

Speech team starts talking

The MU Individual Events team, which finished fourth nationally last year, will attend its first tournament of the season this weekend at Heidelberg College in Tiffin, Ohio.

The Thundering Word, in its seventh season, is instructed by a new coach, Dencil Backus, speech instructor.

The tournament at Heidelberg will be small, with about 15 schools primarily from the midwest, Backus said.

"Some schools that we will meet will be Eastern Michigan, Ohio University, Miami of Ohio, Ball State University and the University of Toledo," Backus said.

The team has the talent and size to do well this year, but "it all depends on the members and their willingness to become critical observers," Backus said.

The team must observe the skills of teammates and of other participants on the circuit and apply what is seen, Backus said.

Rita Sowards, Huntington senior, will compete in persuasive, after dinner and extemporaneous speech. Other participants are Claire Nassif, Wheeling sophomore, persuasive, dramatic duo and extemporaneous speech; Vanessa Phelps, Wheeling sophomore, poetry, dramatic duo and extemporaneous speech; Joe Johns, Columbus, Ohio, senior, poetry, dramatic duo and informative speech; Mark Hickman, Lewisburg senior, impromptu, dramatic duo and informative speech; Sandra Childers, Huntington freshman, dramatic duo and prose-poetry with music; Paula Wells, Huntington freshman, dramatic duo and prose-poetry with music; Bob Lesh, Wheeling, poetry, after-dinner and prose-poetry with music; Carol Proctor, Sylvester senior, impromptu, prose and informative speech, and Tina Huffman, Sod freshman, impromptu and after dinner speech.

"We plan to enter 10 participants in 23 events at Heidelberg," Backus said. "That is not a lot of events," Backus said, "but the host school has limited the tournament to three persons in each event and each person can enter no more than three events."

WVU Law School representatives will be discussing their programs, including admissions, on Nov. 3 at noon in Harris Hall, Room 134.

Dr. Dan K. Evans and Dr. William Walker of St. Mary's Hospital Poison Control Center will lecture on identification and treatment of the ingestion of poisonous plants Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Science Building Room 211.

A "Meet the Candidate" program will be sponsored by the American Association of University Professors Tuesday at 3:15 p.m. in Memorial Student Center Alumni Lounge. All staff and faculty are invited.

Musician Brian Stewart will be at the Campus Christian Center's Icthus Coffee House today at 8 p.m.

English skills weak—committee

Foreign students' ability questioned

Do international students in graduate programs need to take recommended courses for English proficiency?

The Graduate Council has been asked by the Academic Planning and Standards Committee whether international students, most of whom are in the Graduate School, are proficient in English without taking supplemental English and speech courses, said Dr. Paul D. Stewart, dean of the Graduate School.

The problem, which international students have expressed orally in class, was discussed at last night's Graduate Council meeting. Most of the council members present agreed that international students in graduate programs are proficient in written English but many lack the verbal skills needed to participate fully in class discussions.

In the inquiry by academic planning and standards it was stated that the tests all international students take in their native country to determine admission to college are evaluated. Recommendations are made to the international students adviser who in turn makes recommendations to the students' advisers. In many cases, the recommendations are not acted upon and the students do not take English and speech courses, nor do they receive needed tutoring.

Academic planning and standards has asked the Graduate Council if it wants to tighten up its standards in the graduate catalog requiring higher English proficiency for international students.

Since the majority of international graduate students are in the College of Business, representatives of that college at the Graduate Council were asked to review the problem and review catalogs from other universities for any recommendations for change in the graduate catalog pertaining to revised requirements for international students.

Leadership honorary nominations due

Students who have special talents in academics, athletics, student government, social and religious affairs, publications, or the arts are being sought by a national leadership honorary.

Nominations for membership into Omicron Delta Kappa can be made by anyone in the MU community, including the student himself, according to Dr. Everett N. Roush, director of alumni affairs.

Members will be selected from the roster of nominations after determining who satisfies the requirements of having a full year of academic residence at MU, being a junior or senior, and having a cumulative grade point average of 3.15 for juniors and 3.0 for seniors.

The student must fulfill the "five indispensable qualifications" of honorable character, responsible leadership and campus life service, genuine fellowship, superior scholarship, and a dedication to democratic ideals.

A former requirement for admission into ODK was to be a male, but the honorary now admits women.

The accepted nominees will be required to furnish two letters of recommendation, one of which is to be written by the person making the nomination.

The nomination deadline is Nov. 1 at 4:30 p.m. and they must be submitted in Memorial Student Center Room 2W19. Nomination blanks are available in the same office.

Art exhibit may be postponed

The opening of the student artists' "Works on Paper" exhibit which was scheduled for Monday may be temporarily delayed because of repair work being done on the air conditioner in the Marshall Art Gallery, according to June Q. Kilgore, chairman of the art department.

The opening date of the exhibit, which is part of the Marshall Institute for the Arts "Celebration of the Arts," will be announced at a later time, Kilgore said.

The all-new 1979 Berlietta at Dutch Miller Chevrolet.

John David Short has a new way to take your pulse.

The New Camaro Berlietta offers a superb balance between the qualities of a sporty road car and the comfort of a fine touring car. Beneath its classic Camaro styling, Berlietta also offers a wealth of engineering advances. For example, special insulation surrounds you to help reduce engine, wind, and road noise. A new suspension system, unique to Berlietta, gives you a smooth, responsive ride with a road-hugging pleasure you would expect from a car that wears the Camaro name. And if its roadability and ride are special, Berlietta's interior is equally so.

CAMARO. THE HUGGER.

John David Short wants you to come see it this weekend ...drive it...own it...then go out and hug a road.
