Arena destined for drawing board -vice president

By TOM GALVIN Reporter

It's back to the drawing board.

The bids for the multi-purpose athletic facility/arena were rejected Tuesday by the Board of Regents because the lowest bidder for the project was $3 million over the proposed budget.

The cost of the facility was budgeted at $16,590,000 but on Nov. 2 bids were opened and the low bids ranged from $20,100,000 to $21 250 000

"The architects are still looking over the plans for the multi-purpose facility and are trying to meet the budget that Marshall submitted to them," said Karl J. Egnatoff, vice president for administration.

"After they (the architects) complete their study the bids will be reopened," Egnatoff

In other Marshall matters the Board of Regents has allocated $1,050,000 for campus development at MU. The money is to be used for property acquisition, Science Hall renovations and tennis court relocation. "Renovation dollars for the Science Building should be more than that," Egnatoff said. "I'm pleased that the money is available. It is really fiscal 1980 money," he

"The money that was allocated should be sufficient for the tennis courts and our continuing property purchasing," Egnatoff

"We are looking for additional construction and renovations for the Science Building plus other projects," Egnatoff said.

Other projects include an additional elevator in Smith Hall, revamping Old Main auditorium, re-doing the heating systems and installing air conditioning in South and Hodges residence halls, Egnatoff said.

"In house we have several projects we will work on during the semester break in the dorms. Most of our attention will go toward Towers and South Hall. We're trying to renovate the furniture," Egnatoff said. "It is something needed for a long time," he added.

"There will be some touch-up paint in Towers cafeteria along with some roofing work," Egnatoff said.

"The Student Food Committee have come up with some real good ideas for dressing up the cafeteria and we would like to implement as many as those as possible," Egnatoff said.

Student Cabinet hears committee reports

By KEITH BOWIE Reporter

A recommendation calling for moving the traffic light currently at 17th Street and Fifth Avenue to the intersection of 18th Street and Fifth Avenue was made at Wednesday's meeting of the Student Cabinet.

The recommendation, made by the Student Conduct and Welfare Committee, was brought about by the heavy traffic and pedestrian use of the 18th Street intersection, said Nancy Campbell, Greensburg, Penn.,

Other committee reports given at the meeting were by Physical Plant and Facility on vending machines in Harris Hall, Com-Parthenon and University Theatre, and hazard.

The SCWC also asked Vice President of Adminstrative Services Karl J. Egnatoff to check on having a crosswalk painted in front of the Campus Christian Center to replace the moved traffic light.

A new light could not be added on the 18th Street and Fifth Avenue intersection since the city allows only a certain number of traffic signals along a street, Campbell said.

The committee is debating whether to remove the machines permanently or place them in Room 140, Molina reported.

Moving the commencement exercises from Memorial Field House to the "newer and bigger facility" at the Huntington Civic Center is the concern of the Commencement and Honorary Degree Committee, said Maurice W. Ross, Colorado Springs, Colo.,

He remarked that there has been some dissention in committee as to where to place part-time and honorary professors in the ranking for the faculty procession.

Ross said the commencement committee had considered adding special exercises of individual schools, such as the pinning of the nurses to the graduation program.

Cynthia L. Martin, Beckley sophomore, of the Public Relations and Publications Committee, said student activity fee increases were needed for The Parthenon and University Theatre because of fund losses resulting from the recent activity fee regulations made by the Board of Regents, and overall rise of production costs. The Parthenon, Martin said, has not received a fee increase in 15 years.

Louis R. Molina, Huntington senior, said the University Council had worked hard for the faculty senate, but that he expected it to be defeated because there are "going to be so many special interests." He said an example was the recognition of librarians.

Another council suggestion was the posting of grades, Molina said. The council, he told the cabinet, is consulting with the state attorney on putting up the grades so only individual students would know their

Student Body President Ed Hamrick said the present method of instructors handing out the grades to each student is "more personal" and the "student is better off." He said if grades were posted, the present method should be continued as well.

Molina also reported for the Student Court and Chief Justice. He said the court will begin work on lobbying for different issues. Presently, Molina said, the court is investigating the Equal Rights Amendment as a possible lobbying issue.

The court may also begin a legislative file on the activities of local, state and federal legislators who involve themselves with Marshall in political campaigns. Molina said the file would contain bills and voting records of legislators for future reference during political campaigns.

Consumer Protection/Off-Campus Housing Director Robert Lesh suggested to the cabinet that cards be printed and distributed to off-campus students, who would later give them to their landlords. The cards would ask the landlord to give Student Government notice when they had vacancies in housing for students, Lesh said. Robert A. Fenno, reporting for the

Lecturer warns of subliminal seduction

By ALISA FINK

Reporter At first glance, the advertisement appears innocent enough: a picture of a stack of ice cubes in a glass ready to be filled with Johnnie Walker Black Label Scotch.

But a closer examination of the cubes reveals the shapes of screaming faces. monsters, a man with a cobra, a man's feet and legs hanging in midair, and a bird with a skull and castrated penis under its beak.

This is one of many examples of subliminal seduction ads that Wilson Bryan Key, president of Mediaprobe Inc. and author of two books on the subject, used in his lecture Thursday night in Memorial

"This ad is a remarkable and expensive piece of art," Key said. "I have yet to find an advertising man who will explain one of these ads to me."

According to Key, these shapes are purposely put into these ads by the designers, who seem to know more about why people drink than they do themselves.

Most people don't look at advertisements for more than two or three seconds, so the ad must be able to affect them during that length of time, Key said.

"Our society focuses on two areas — the origin of life (love and sex) and the end of life (death)," Key said. "The more taboo the in embedding images into the subconscious mind.

Key said he objects to subliminal manipulation because he sees it as an invasion of privacy. This, he said, is why he has undertaken his campaign of teaching, writing and lecturing.

A sociology professor at the University of Western Ontario for six years until he left in 1975, Key said he was the victim of two years of harassment by the university, which he claimed was supported by Seagrams Corp.

"These techniques have the potential for good use, too, such as helping people out of addictive syndromes," Key said. "I'd like to see the problem dealt with through educaarea, the better subliminal seduction works tion rather than legislation."

Laos refugee flees death; settles in area By BELINDA ANDERSON

Refugee

Spring, 1975.

In the midst of unrest in southeast Asia, it is obvious that Laos is to fall under Communist control. Bounthanh Khounlavong, the chief of Laos' national drug control enforcement program, realizes his life is in danger.

After getting his family out of the country on a makeshift ferry, Khounlavong tries to escape that night, but fails. His two companions are shot and killed. He is airlifted by helicopter the next day into northern Thailand. Five days later, he is reunited with his family in the refugee camp.

Khounlavong and his family arrive in Ashland, Ky., met by Del and Carol Spier, friends who offered sponsorship. Khounlavong reflects during the drive to the Spiers' home, "In two years my children will not even remember their language."

Working as a security guard for Ashland Synthetic Fuel Inc. is a big step down for a Laos government officer whose position was just under the defense ministry, which answered directly to the president.

However, had Khounlavong not fled his native country, he would no doubt be dead by now, due to his American associations. His American friends included the Spiers, who lived in Laos from 1972 to 1974. Del, who is now security director at Ashland Oil, was then in the civilian foreign service in the Department of Public Safety.

"I was very close to the American society," Khounlavong said. "When the Communists took over they would have killed me. Because I knew Americans, they would have said I was a spy."

Khounlavong has a sister and a cousin in Laos that he can never contact because "I don't want to cause trouble for them. They might be harassed because of me."

Carol Spier can still remember the problems the Khounlavongs encountered in coming here. "When we left in '74, we were still corresponding as friends, and then in the spring of '75 Bounthanh wrote us that it looked like the country was going to fall. "We didn't hear anything for a long time, and then he wrote us in July from the refugee camp in Thailand," Spier recounted. "He had received word that due to his working closely with the American government, he was first on the Communists' assassination

"He decided to get his family out first. He had to hand his five children (aged two to 10) to strangers and ask them to see to the children's safety. It wasn't until the ferry had reached the Thailand shore that the mother and children were reunited."

In describing Khounlavong's escape, Spier said, "He tried to get out that night. The two men with him were shot and killed, and he had to retreat. He was airlifted the next day into northern Thailand. It took him five days to reach his family.

"We got a letter from him in the late summer, when he wrote, 'I'm going to have to ask for your help. It is no longer safe here, but I have reached an impasse with the embassy.' The Spiers wrote the embassy, offering their sponsorship, and the Khounlavongs arrived in Kentucky Sept. 17,

"It was really hard," Spier recalled, "to see a man of such prestige, looking like a refugee. He couldn't even speak at first. Tears were streaming down his face.

"They spent three months at our home and it was just a tremendous experience." Spier was like for two completely different families with completely different cultures getting

"I know this sounds like a cliche, but never have we ever given so little and received so much in return. We received food and warm clothing from the churches and the community. Bounthanh kept saying it came because they were our friends, but we had only been here eight months."

In describing Khounlavong, Spier said, "You just can't imagine the strength of this man. Five days after he was here, he said he wanted to go to work. Del told him he needed the rest, but he was determined. He only made $4,000 a year at his first job, but within a year after being here, he had paid back every single dime we had spent on the

After going through a series of interviews and lie detector tests, Khounlavong got a job with Ashland Oil paying $17,000 a year. They're saving money to buy a house—he refuses mortgages. To save that money, they're living very frugally in a two-bedroom continued. "You just can't imagine what it anything," Spiers noted. "When his fiveyear daughter first became sick, he refused to believe she had a terminal illness (cancer). He took off a week from work and spent every waking hour with the child, trying to instill in her the will to live. And for a while, she perked up. However, he finally accepted that it was inevitable.

"To look at that family and see what they're doing is incredible. When the baby died in '76, they had to go through a totally different kind of ceremony, and bury her in a soil not theirs. They're strong people.

"The children are doing just beautifully," Spier added. "In less than a year they were speaking perfectly understandable English with a Kentucky drawl." Khounlavong didn't receive quite as much of a cultural shock as the rest of his family because he had previously studied at the International Policy Academy in

After the dismissal Monday of head coach Frank Ellwood and his staff, Marshall's football program again finds itself facing a crucial transition.

And the penetrating problem should not be merely the question of his heir's appellation. Instead, the overall scope and goals of the constantly floundering gridiron effort must be examined — and quite possibly altered - if Thundering Herd football ever is to be competitive.

Since Marshall was granted university status in 1962, its football squads have enjoyed only two winning campaigns and one 5-5 season. Of the five men have been at the helm during those 17 years, four have failed to by many factors — a "basketball produce more than four wins in a oriented" region, fickle fans and

SC member Davidson already has admitted its inability to compete with other league schools in football. The Wildcats now are Division 1-AA in that sport and 1-A in all others.

Despite its size and resources, Marshall has not produced a winning team since 1964. So instead of shoving another coach into the present self-defeating situation, Athletic Director Joseph H. McMullen and Hayes must consider imitating David-

Even if conducted on a fiveyear trial basis, such a drop to Division 1-AA would give Marshall almost immediate parody with any foe. Despite ineligibility for the SC title, the chances for success balance any possible drawbacks. Wins mean attendance. And attendance means revenue - a vital consideration for any athletic

And if the Herd is successful at that level of competition, it can consider a move back to Division 1-A. Western Carolina and University of Tennessee-Chattanooga did not gain 1-A status until they achieved SC membership. The results? Buoyed by success at the lower level of competition, UT-C won the league title in its first year of eligibility. And WCU currently is challenging for the 1978 crown.

SALISBURY, Rhodesia Rhodesia's transitional government, following days of internal bickering, declared Thursday night that the country's handover to black majority rule is being delayed four months until April 1979. In terms of the Salisbury agreement between white Prime minister Ian Smith and moderate local black nationalist leaders, the first universal suffrage elections to choose a black government were scheduled for Dec. 31 of this year.

But after a nine-hour meeting of the 21 black and white ministers of the transition government Thursday, a government spokesman announced the new date for elections.

A postponement was vigorousopposed by the Salisbury administration's main black leader, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, who said earlier this week that any delay would "invite disaster."

CHARLESTON - Police said Thursday two women killed in an accident on the West Virginia Turnpike had wallets and a purse which did not belong to them and were driving a car registered to an unknown person at a ficticious Charlotte, N.C., address.

The accident Wednesday involved the women's car and a pickup truck. In addition to the women, Ernest Manning, 41, of Amelia, Ohio, was killed and Gerald Manning, 39, of Felicity, Ohio, his brother, was injured. The latter remained unconcious Thursday in a Charleston

The women were identified as Charline Brown, 49, of Detroit, Mich., and her niece, Denise Shambley, 26, of Charlotte.

Police said they found in the wreckage a purse belonging to Sandra Renee Jones of Virginia. They said Virginia state troopers found Miss Jones and said they were told her purse had been missing for several days.

The car was registered to Jessica Ann Bryant of Charlotte, but police there discovered that no one named Bryant had ever lived at the address listed, authorities said.

Lt. Jack Gribben of the Turnpike State Police said the women's car went out of control during a heavy rain and was hit by the truck in which the Ohio men were riding.

Ellwood era to end in Carolina

Sports Bureau Chief

Ten senior football players and seven coaches will be giving their last efforts in Marshall uniforms Saturday at East Carolina. It won't be an easy task, according to Marshall head coach Frank Ellwood.

"East Carolina is probably the best team we've played in four years," Ellwood said. "They have good personnel and excellent speed. They're actively seeking a bowl bid."

The Pirates are currently 7-3, including wins over Western Carolina (14-6), Southwestern Louisiana (38-9), University of Texas at Arlington (23-17), Virginia Military Institute (19-6), Richmond (21-14), Appalachian State (33-8) and William & Mary (20-3).

The three losses came against North Carolina (14-10), N.C. State (29-13) and Southern Mississippi (17-16).

The Thundering Herd has stumbled its way to a 1-9 record including nine consecutive losses after an opening 17-0

Ellwood, his coaching staff and seniors will be shooting for their 10th victory against 34 defeats.

On the subject of the departing seniors, Ellwood said, "I'm just pleased with every individual. Each one has been a real worker and working with this type of personnel is one of the pleasures of coaching."

Ed Hamrick, Clendenin; Joey Brison, Charleston; Bob Campbell, East Bank; Mike Johnson, South Charleston; Randy Chafin, Van; Mike Kesling, Rock, Pa.; Mike Sprouse, Oak Harbor, Ohio; Dan Wells, Middletown, Ohio, and Paul Wheeler, Beckley, are the departing seniors.

Six seniors are regular starters. Chafin will be sitting out his final game with an injury. John Kirkling, Greensburg, Pa. junior, will get the nod at Chafin's offensive tackle position.

The Herd and Pirates have clashed four times on the football field. The first meeting in 1967 saw ECU win 29-13. In 1968, Eastern Carolina rolled to a 49-20 victory. Marshall's lone win of the series came 38-7 in 1969.

The Pirates won 17-14 in 1970, but the score was overshadowed by the loss of the MU squad, coaches and fans in the tragic plane crash on the trip home from Greenville, N.C.

Ellwood described the attitude of the team this week: "We are going down working. These guys just keep working hard. I would say the practices have been of the 'workman' type. As far as attitude goes there has been no great enthusiasm, but there has also been no

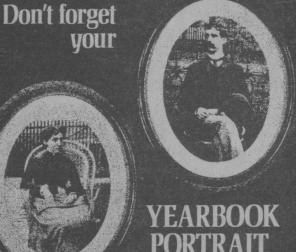

Ellwood said the team did not practice Sunday or Monday, but had two good workouts on Tuesday and Wednesday before Thursday's review session and light practice.

Ellwood said the players have reacted to the administration's decision not to rehire him and his staff. "Most of the players were disappointed, but some of them were probably happy," Ellwood said. "They just have to be realistic. This type of thing happens in this world and happen."

understand."

Ellwood said he disagrees with the time MU Director of Athletics Joe McMullen selected to make the announcement. "It would have been better for the coaches and the players if the decision had been announced later," Ellwood said. "The timing of the whole thing put us in a precarious position."

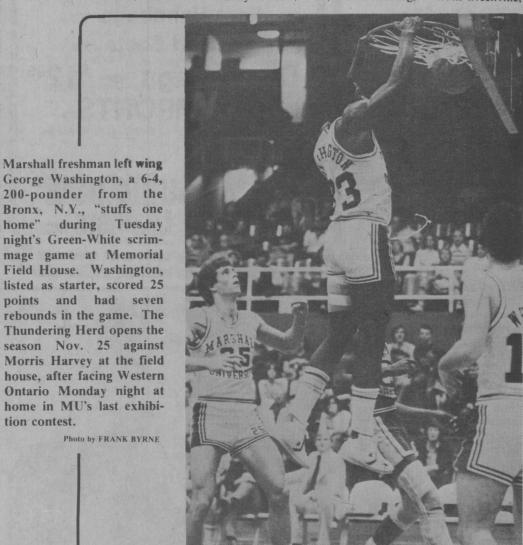

Mistakes, or lack of, are the key to the final game of the season, according to Ellwood. "I expect a wide open football game," Ellwood said. "I'm worried about our consistancy on offense. We have to be able to move the football. We'll need to eliminate our mistakes or they (East Carolina) might jump out on us and I certainly don't want that to

Only one thing stands in the way of the start of the '78-'79 Thundering Herd basketball season — an exhibition game against Western Ontario.

The Canadian team will be in town Monday to face Stu Aberdeen's youth-laden squad, which sports 10 freshmen and sophomores.

Swimmers' first meet Saturday

Marshall University's "best swim team on paper," according to Coach Bob Saunders, will have its first test Saturday.

The team travels to Youngstown, Ohio, to compete against six teams at 1:00 p.m.

The team is apprehensive and expectant, according to Coach Bob Saunders. "After eight weeks of official and unofficial practices we will find things out," Saunders said. "For a lot of the guys it's their last go-around. For others, it's their first college meet."

Saunders said he is interested in seeing Youngstown, the winner of its own meet last year.

Other teams include Clarion State, in Pennsylvania, with an excellent program, according to Saunders. Pennsylvania has fine high school swim team programs, according to Saunders. Clarion has one of the better teams in NCAA division II.

Fairmont State placed second in the meet last year. Saunders said Fairmont has a balanced Aberdeen said that Canadian basketball has been strengthened considerably with the addition of the "fifth-year rule." The fifthyear rule allows American players with four years of college experience to attend a Canadian college for graduate school and play another year while pursuing their master's degrees.

"You can see naturally how that would tend to make some of those teams pretty strong. A lot of talented American players take advantage of the rule, and it has tended to strengthen the play of Canadian teams," Aberdeen said.

The game should give the > Aberdeen said the annual green-white scrimmage Wednesday was a big step for the team. "The game was just aother step up the ladder. We have the game for a couple of reasons. First, we want to introduce the team members to the fans, and let them get a feel for playing in front of a crowd. Secondly, the players need to get used to playing with officials, a game clock, and getting used to having a game day and a game night."

Aberdeen said the Herd will play much the same way against Western as it has in practice.

"We are not going to come out with anything special. We will just try to play simple basketball," Aberdeen said. "We are going to play the way we know we can, and make sure Marshall University doesn't beat Marshall University.
