Hearing will reveal cause of the crash

A three day federal hearing is anticipated starting Monday, Dec. 14 as a four-man board of inquiry listens to testimonies concerning the Nov. 14 airplane crash at Tri-State Airport that took 75 lives.

According to a press release from the National Transportation Safety Board, an expected 20 witnesses are to testify at the hearing in the Frederick Hotel.

The four-man hearing panel is composed of Oscar Laurel, NTSB member and presiding officer; C.O. Miller, director of the Bureau of Aviation Safety and assistant to Laurel; Richard Rodriguez, hearing officer; and David Zimmermann from the office of general council.

The panel will listen to testimony and other information concerning the crash and then return to Washington to study the findings.

The hearing will determine whether there was an instrument failure or pilot misjudgment that caused the Southern Airways DC9 jet to flare off course and crash into a hillside about two miles short of the runway.

After the hearing, the testimonies and other information concerning the crash has been analyzed by the NTSB, "a final report will be listed and will include the safety board's formal determination of the cause plus any recommendations that will help prevent any similar tragedies in the future," Laurel said.

The final report is not expected to be completed before April, according to Edward Slattery, director of the office of public affairs of the NTSB.

Gant to head regent's student advisory council

Student Body President Michael Gant was elected chairman of the Board of Regents student advisory council Monday.

The council of student body presidents for the 10 state colleges and universities is designed to serve as a communications committee with Chancellor Prince Woodard.

Gant said the first meeting was to discuss the student conduct code, although they mostly did organizational work. Gant commented, "We had a very good meeting. It really looks like this committee is going to develop into something. The students will now have an effective channel into the Regents and into the power that is in higher education."

Regent Andrews says president will be named soon

By GARY RAMSEY
News editor

"We are sure we will have a name of the new president for you soon," said Earl T. Andrews, president of the West Virginia Board of Regents, when contacted Thursday at his office in Berkeley Springs.

"All of us are intensely interested in the selection of a new president for Marshall University," Andrews said.

"We want to find the best president for Marshall and we would like to see you have one of the best presidents in the nation.

According to Andrews, the job of selecting a president "is not the easiest undertaking.

"There are several reasons for the delay in selecting a president," Andrews said.

"Most people who are potentials for the University presidency have contracts and previous commitments, and it takes time for these people to make up their minds about the offer."

Andrews did say several people have been interviewed for the job and the Board is still interviewing potential presidents, but "two of the men who we had high hopes for have withdrawn their names because of other commitments."

Kanawha County Judge Dennis Knapp, who is on the selection committee, told The Parthenon Thursday "the selection committee has submitted a list to the Board for approval and, at this time, the committee is not functioning."

Dr. N. Bayard Green, professor of zoology, and member of the selection committee, said "We have made our recommendations to the Board and since then we haven't heard anything from them."

Approximately 15 people have been interviewed for the job since he has been a member of the committee, according to Green. Of those 15, two lists, one which contained five names and the other which contained four, have been submitted.

According to Green, Dr. Harry Heflin, vice president of West Virginia University, was offered the job earlier during the consideration period, but turned it down.

Dr. Donald N. Dedmon, acting president of the University withdrew his name from the running Nov. 14.

When contacted at his office yesterday, Dr. Dedmon was asked by the Parthenon if he would consider putting his name back in the running. He explained that he had been occupied dealing with the tragedy and had not had time to consider his personal plans.

According to Dr. Prince B. Woodard, chancellor of The Board of Regents, "I really don't know when the screening of the people under consideration will be finished. I would say the Board's desire is to resolve the vacancy as soon as possible."

Big names slated in memorial benefit

Several top entertainers will appear in Huntington in March for a benefit show to aid the Marshall Memorial Fund.

Among those who may appear are Bill Cosby, Pat Paulsen, John Sebastian, the Fifth Dimension, Joe Namath, Judy Collins and Roosevelt Greer, according to Jeff Nemens, director of student activities.

"These people are a representative group of the caliber of talent that will appear here. While it is not definite that any of these people will appear, there will be top-name entertainers appearing," said Nemens.

Gerald Purcell, president of Purcell Associates Ltd. a management firm and president of The Conference of Personal Managers, East, is heading the drive to get performers.

"He is a man in a position to get the best entertainment available and is doing it without charge. His entire staff is working to make this a success," said Nemens.

The National Entertainment Conference which deals in entertainment for colleges is also helping.

The benefit is to enable Marshall students to contribute to the Memorial Fund, according to Nemens. "Instead of having many small fund raising campaigns, we feel that one large benefit would best serve the fund," he said.

"The Student Government is supporting the benefit and will underwrite the cost, unless it jeopardizes funds. I don't think that there will be any cost to the benefit," said Rich Dunfee, Wheeling senior and social affairs commissioner for Student Government.

On-campus operations for WMUL-TV begin Monday

WMUL-TV will be operating from the Telecommunications Building Monday morning, according to George Parnicza, chief engineer, and Terry M. Hollinger, general manager.

Parnicza, who originally said the move would come by December 21, moved the date to Monday after evaluating the progress in wiring up the new studios.

He originally hoped to be on the air by Monday but waited until Wednesday to make his final decision. Parnicza said the only complications in making the move were whether the equipment here in Huntington would be ready and whether the microwave relay was operable. Equipment and relay checks yesterday revealed no problems and, Parnicza made the decision to get on the air from Huntington by Monday.

Saturday morning two video tape recorders will be moved from Nitro to Huntington. They will be installed over the weekend and ready to go by sign on Monday at 8 a.m.

Terry Hollinger, general manager WMUL-TV, said the Huntington move will not bring about any big changes in operation. "It means we don't have to ship tapes and films from here to Nitro, but it'll cause a headache in the sense it'll limit our production capabilities in Nitro for awhile."

Hollinger said the move will severely hamper the instructional television operation in Nitro because only one video tape recorder will be available.

Planning of the Huntington on the air operation began in July 1967 when the first WMUL TV staff was assembled. Building delays caused WMUL-TV to go on the air operating with special temporary authority from Nitro until the Telecommunications Building was completed.

A Page Of Opinion

FRANKLY SPEAKING by Phil Frank

THE TITLE OF MY SPEECH IS - "WHY WE SHOULD HAVE SEX EDUCATION IN SCHOOLS!"

Abortion justifiable?

How can we justify an abortion? Almost all the present legislative attempts emphasize three justifications for legal abortions: rape, incest, and the probability of a defective child, but there is an overriding consideration. When a fetus is destroyed, has something valuable been destroyed? The fetus has the potential to become a human being which is valuable, therefore is not the fetus of equal value? To answer this it is important to note that no nation or state requires the fetus to be treated like a dead person. The early fetus may, with impunity, be flushed down the toilet or thrown out with the garbage. The situation must be analyzed without delay, and unless we take a discerning stand on the issue of abortion, our present system of compulsory pregnancy will substantially continue without change.

Letter to the editor

TO THE EDITOR:

In order for the Athletic Department of Marshall University to overcome the tragedy of the football team and continue to go forth with dedication and success, it is very important that the new athletic director be a man who is familiar with the university, has experience in directing athletics, and a dedication to Marshall University and the people it serves. Ellis T. Johnson is the person who is capable of doing the job. Ellis Johnson was athletic director at Morehead State University for 18 years. He is the one man who knows what Marshall University needs, and has the know-how to succeed in meeting them. Ellis Johnson truly has the dedication for Marshall University that will be so very necessary in the days that are ahead.

An editorial

Who told you the facts?

The opponents of sex education in schools must eventually come to the realization that their offsprings, in all probability, will not receive adequate instruction from home.

It would be very enlightening to see the results of a survey of young adults who have actually discussed sexuality with their parents openly and extensively. Too many young people seek other avenues of education in their maturing years rather than confront their parents. Thus, there are many young high school graduates who are either uninformed or misinformed on pertinent sex topics, the knowledge of which is essential to their well-being.

A recent article in Look Magazine said that over the last five years there has been an explosion of illegitimate pregnancy among young people and that many of these unwed mothers are teenagers or in the 20 to 24 years age group. It also points to the unknown, but huge, number of abortions each year, forced marriages, the million Americans between 15 and 24 suffering from gonorrhea, and the misinformation concerning birth control. As the article says, "The aware generation turns out to be surprisingly ignorant."

No longer can parents pretend that they are going to explain the facts of life to their children. Even if they succeed in discussing the basics with them, they will most likely fail to continue their discussions with any depth. And young people will continue to make the same mistakes, adding to the already unfortunate statistics.

Sex education in our schools at present may need a great deal of improvement but, in addition, the Look article explains why "parents need to understand the powerful emotional factors preventing too many young people from using the theoretical knowledge about sex that they already possess." This then is another apparent reason for the need to further expand the teaching of sex education with an equal amount of trained professionals in the field. And it should not be limited to the grade schools and junior high schools, but should be continued through high school and even college as required courses.

A college sex education course, even if required, would undoubtedly have a high attendance rate, provided there was proper instruction; and, since the population problem is so much with us today, what better way could it be emphasized than in a course of this nature along with instruction of sexual behavior.

The nation must develop a basic attitude toward sex education as was recently put forth in a report prepared by a committee of leading Presbyterian churchmen. It said, in part, that "... The church has a positive interest... in programs of sex education in the schools... and should not, either by inaction or by opposition to such programs, support a conspiracy of silence about sex in the schools..."

The world's oceans are a vast and complex natural resource requiring study on the global scale, from many different scientific viewpoints. Norton Ginsburg, Ralph Johnson and Thomas Schopf, all of the University of Chicago, discuss the ocean-data explosion since World War II, deplore governmental red tape and corporate-military secrecy in oceanographic research, and advocate an international scientific agency to co-ordinate the future study and management of the sea.

7:00 JAZZ AFTER HOURS: An intermixture of early jazz and contemporary jazz is tonight's format.

"BLOW UP" TONIGHT

The movie "Blow Up" will be presented by the MU Film Force at 6:30 and 8:30 today in the Evelyn Hollberg Smith Music Hall, according to Nancy Monk, Huntington freshman and Film Force coordinator.

Tickets will be sold at the door for 50 cents.

the office of John S. Callebs, director of development, is quickly recognized by return letter. Many contributors simply mail checks, but others enclose notes, cards and even poems which deserve special attention.

The diversity of donors is evident from a sampling of Callebs' mail, but they are also similar in that each is simply trying to convey their grief and offer what help they can with their charity.

An elementary school child from Tonawanda, N.Y., sent her gift and attached a note written on a small fragment of lined paper. The letters differed in size from line to line, but her message was crystal clear. She just wanted to convey her sadness.

"The donations are small but our hearts are with them," wrote a couple from Wilsie, W. Va.

Several public schools from the state have collected from their student bodies and sent Marshall the money.

A woman from Lansing, Mich., apologized for not being able to send more money, but instead enclosed a poem she had written expressing her grief.

Manufacturing firms both in and out of the immediate area have sent contributions. One retail store manager in Charlotte, N.C., sent a donation in name of one of the players on the football team who died. His brother worked for the store.

Church groups have sent checks to the memorial fund.

"This tragedy has bereaved the entire world," wrote one Ashland, Ky. physician.

"I have the very highest regard for the school. Please accept my sympathy," said the letter of a former MU faculty member.

"Marshall University is very much a part of my life, as I had the honor of playing against your fine basketball teams in the late 1950's. Being aware of the spirit that has been a part of your University, I have confidence in your ability to recover from your great loss," said the director of alumni affairs at a neighboring university.

"Our finite minds cannot clearly understand the meaning of it all," wrote a former high school teacher from Weston, W. Va.

Students from other universities have sent donations and notes of sympathy meant for our student body.

"I can imagine the great loss the school and the victims' families are experiencing," said a coed from the University of Michigan.

"I want you to know that we all share in your grief here. I hope that my small contribution will help a truly fine school rebuild the great football team that they have always had," wrote another coed from Ohio State University.

The letters from members of Marshall alumni are numerous and each expresses an individual, yet shared, sadness at the tragedy which befell their Alma Mater.

"All the words which can be spoken or written have been spoken or written. That leaves me with nothing to add—but my shock and my sadness are as deep and as wrenching," said the letter of a Tennessee physician.

"My husband and I are among the many who have a special place in our heart for Marshall, as Huntington was my home and I attended Marshall. Also my husband refereed many basketball games for Marshall and had so many friends on that plane.

"Marshall will be in our prayers. We know they will have that 'second effort' and come back," wrote a couple from Clarksburg.

"I love Marshall and want to do something," wrote another woman from the area.

Perhaps one of the best messages came from a Marshall alumna from San Jose, Calif.

"Although the University gave me a great deal, I have never given anything and it seems that the time has come."

Broadcast fees donated

Independent television stations which carried the Texas-Arkansas football game last Saturday were required by their sponsors to send checks to the Marshall University Memorial Fund in lieu of rights payments, according to a letter received by John S. Callebs, director of development.

The game, which determined the winner of the Southwest Conference, was sponsored by the Humble Oil and Refining Co. which made the request instead of the customary charge for the game feed, according to the letter from a representative of the firm.

If the feed-request was from a larger city, the letter said the station was asked to send Marshall $100. Fees ranged from that figure down to $25 for smaller cities carrying the broadcast.

"We plan to assign 66 percent of the money to Marshall and 33 percent to Wichita, since other assistance has already been given to Wichita State," the representative said.

Throughout the game, public service announcements were made informing the public of the oil company's fee donation. Viewers were then told if they,

Publications set for release soon

Marshall University Student Handbooks and Student Directories are scheduled to be released next Thursday and Friday according to Mary Martin, St. Albans junior and public relations and publications commissioner.

The directory will have the student's name, campus address and phone, and home address. If a student's name does not appear in the directory, it is because he did not sign the information card at registration.

"We will try to distribute the directories and handbooks Thursday and Friday. The directories will be taken to the dorms, and other students may pick them up at the Student Government Office."

More black studies sought

Members of the academic advisory committee, working with Dr. A. Mervin Tyson, vice president of academic affairs, are working on extending the existing black studies program.

The group has discussed adding to the existing 27 hours in social studies, anthropology, English, history, political science, and speech, an additional 33 hours.

The new courses would be in Bible and religion, economics, education, history (consisting of a division of History 316, black history, into two courses), journalism, music, philosophy, psychology, sociology, and art.

Details of establishing the field of study as a major and a minor have yet to be worked out. The major would have an interdepartment base similar to the major in international affairs. Therefore, there is a precedent for the major, however, according to the catalog a minor must be in a single department.

Committee members are in the process of meeting with the respective department heads to discuss the possibility of these additions for the 1971-72 school year or as soon as possible. Progress has already been made in several departments according to committee members.

According to Fredric George,

Huntington senior, Dr. Charles Moffat, professor of history found the idea of dividing History 316 "acceptable" to his department, but said the committee would have to check with Herbert Henderson, who teaches the course, to see if he is interested in teaching two courses.

George also met with Dr. Arthur S. Carpenter, professor of art. According to George, Dr. Carpenter said that a course could be added in that department. He also said that John E. Dolin, assistant professor of art, who specializes in art history would probably teach such a course. This would deal with primitive art forms with emphasis on African and oceanic art forms.

The department said that they already have a basis for the course, but the addition would involve gaining new materials and developing a course from there. They also said, "There would be little problem in gaining those materials." According to George the course would probably be on the 300 level.

Committee member Angela Dodson, Chesapeake sophomore, met with W. Page Pitt, professor of journalism, and Dr. C. A. Oliphant, associate professor of journalism on the possibility of adding a course in their department. According to Miss Dodson both were agreeable to the idea.

The department suggested that the course deal with the history of the minority press which would include the history of several minority ethnic groups in America. It would probably be a 400 or 500 level course as the committee envisions it.

The committee members are to formulate a syllabus and present it to the department. Miss Dodson is presently researching the subject matters and intends to consult members of the department for a suggested working bibliography. The committee hopes to have the course ready for offering in the fall of 1971.

Bill Redd, Gary junior, met with Dr. Joseph La Casia, professor of economics who said he was "Very glad to see students interested in such activities," and that he would cooperate as much as possible. He also said that he would be very glad to present a statement concerning the course to the faculty of his department.

Along with Dr. LaCasia they would decide whether there is validity for such a course. The course according to the committee would deal with the economic problems of minorities in the United States.

Other members of the committee are meeting with their assigned departments this week and will make a report at the committee meeting Friday at 2 p.m. in Dr. Tyson's office.

Trio will present program

By DEAN WALLER
Staff reporter

The Howard Hanger Trio of Atlanta will present a special Christmas program this weekend at the Campus Christian Center along with the other regular activities.

Rev. Hardin W. King, Presbyterian campus pastor, will coordinate the program, which will be an "experimental" worship designed for campus and community people," according to Reverend King.

Howard Hanger, who began the Trio in 1965, said the theme of their program is "to celebrate life and the Giver of life in a single act. . . to open your eyes and ears and nose and mouth and senses and even your self to this life, given and lived-in God."

The Trio has made two albums entitled "A Child Is Born" and "Through a Glass Darkly" with theme songs of the same name.

Bill Huie, the producer of "A Child Is Born," commented that the theme is "an attempt to express musically the experience of child birth. . . the agony, the pain, the relief, the joy, and the hope—the eternal hope present with every newborn child."

Robby Barnes, the producer of "Through a Glass Darkly," said, "This is the Trio's manifestation of hope. . . hope for the world through love and compassion, trust, and brotherhood."

Many clergymen and church officials have commented favorably about the Trio's work. Don M. Wardlow, professor of worship and communication at the Theological Columbia Seminary in Decatur, Georgia, said, "The Howard Hanger Trio play their particular jazz idiom free, jovial, mobile, and lively

ARBA CONFERENCE

Prof. Thomas W. Olson, assistant professor of engineering, and students of the CE 400 class (Transportation) will attend a conference of American Road Builders' Association (ARBA) student chapters this Friday afternoon.

The ARBA student chapter of West Virginia Tech and West Virginia Department of Highways is sponsoring the third annual West Virginia Highway Conference in the Engineering Auditorium at West Virginia Institute of Technology in Montgomery.

You don't just listen to their music, you get with it."

Bishop James Armstrong, United Methodist Church of South Dakota, spoke of the Trio as "one of the most wholesome, sensitive, and talented jazz groups I know anything about. Their interpretations and improvisations are brilliant and deeply moving."

"The members of the Trio combine Christian commitment with superb musicianship in a splendid combination that enables them to make a unique contribution to the search for new liturgical forms as an expression of the gospel of Christ in this age of the secular city," according to John A.

Anderson, executive secretary of the Board of National Ministries of the Presbyterian Churches.

"By seeking to establish a sense of awareness, by attempting to break down the barriers that exist between the 'sacred' and the 'secular', by using one means after another to open persons to each other," Hanger said, "the Trio looks for the Spirit to take it from there, and to see God's activity in the world, now; to come together as a community if only for a moment."

The program will begin at 1:30 p.m. Saturday during a Worship Workshop and end at 5:30 p.m. beginning again at 8:30 p.m. during a Coffee House activity.

The University Service of Worship will feature the Trio at 10:45 a.m. Sunday and the Enslo Park Presbyterian Church will present the Trio at 7:30 p.m., according to Reverend King.

Other activities of this weekend include Catholic Community confession at 5 p.m. and Mass at 6 p.m. Saturday and 9:45 a.m. Sunday and communion given by Rev. George L. Sublette, Baptist campus pastor during the University Service of Worship at 10:45 a.m. Sunday.

Dinner will be served at 5:30 p.m. Sunday and followed by Creative Worship at 6:20 p.m.

Facilities survey to be presented to dorm residents

A survey of dorm facilities will be passed out today at the cafeterias before dinner according to Ray Wolfe, Moundsville sophomore.

Wolfe said the purpose of the survey is communication and legislation for things that need to be done and was drawn up by a committee of IDC and senate.

Surveys will be given to students as they enter the cafeteria for dinner and taken up as they leave. Questions in the survey pertain to activities, dorm facilities, hospital service, women's hours, study areas, lounges, and tutoring and counseling services.

"It (the survey) should have been done long ago," Wolfe stated. "It is the first sign I see that Student Government and IDC are trying to get an organized idea of what the students want and need. It is a 14-point survey and I hope it leads to a 14-point plan of action."

Two swim tilts here Saturday

By LARRY HURLEY
Sports writer

Coach Bob Saunders and the Marshall University swimming team launch the 1970-71 season this weekend with two meets at the Gullickson Hall pool.

Weekend action begins with Marshall hosting Morehead State University at 4 p.m. today, then returns to the pool to entertain Eastern Kentucky University at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Morehead is reported to be improved over last year's squad. Morehead is led by Tom Abel, a free-styler.

Eastern Kentucky, which has had a number of All-American swimmers, will be strong again this year, according to Saunders. "They are a balanced team with depth and quality in each event."

Saunders believes this year's squad will be competitive in every event despite a lack of overall depth.

Five returning lettermen are the backbone of this year's team. The distance events should be strong with the return of David Beakes, Clarksburg junior, and John Zook, Columbus, Ohio, sophomore.

Also returning are Ralph Gardner, Cincinnati, Ohio, junior, in the individual medley; Greg Broxterman, Cincinnati, Ohio, sophomore, in the breaststroke, and Jeff Pratt, Columbus, Ohio, sophomore, in the sprint events.

Saunders also expects good results from Tom Gardner, Cincinnati, Ohio, freshman, in the butterfly; Bob Schmitt, Cincinnati, Ohio, freshman, in the backstroke and Tom McCoy, Delbarton freshman, in the diving events.

Rounding out the team are Rick Houvouras, Huntington junior; Scott Oughterson, Stuart, Fla., freshman; Steve McBride, St. Albans freshman; John Carenbauer, Wheeling sophomore, and Bruce Kahn, West Orange, N.J., sophomore. All are free stylers, with Kahn also doubling as a utility man.

"The competition this weekend will be tough. I feel certain both teams will know they were engaged in a real competitive swim meet."

"We'll be shooting for some records, especially in the 400 yard relay event."

Hoof Beats

Dave Smith, MU's second most prolific scorer and rebounder, may well face his toughest game and opponent of the basketball season Saturday evening when Marshall's Thundering Herd takes on La Salle College in the Palestra.

Smith, newly-found scoring threat, is a johnny-come-lately to the ranks of the double figure scorers. In three games this season he has bettered his career high scoring game by one point and has shot 58.5 per cent, tops on the team from the floor.

In addition to his average of 17.7 points a contest, Smith has pulled down 40 rebounds for an average of 13.3 per game.

However, in playing La Salle, Smith will face All-American Ken Durrett, who has switched from forward to center.

Durrett, 6-7, 188, was named to the first team All-American squad in pre-season polls. So far this season Durrett has lived up to his pre-season billing.

In La Salle's three games, Durrett has scored 100 points for a 33.3 average.

It looks as if it will be the weight and strength of "Big Dave" Smith against the prolific outside shooting of Ken Durrett in Saturday's encounter.

In La Salle's three games Durrett has scored 100 points for a 33.3 average.

For, just like MU, La Salle features a balanced scoring attack. Against Miami of Florida, Bob Fields scored 23 points, Jim Crawford, 20 points and Ken Durrett, 21 points.

"Ticket sales have reached about the half-way mark of my goal," said Dr. Robert Alexander, director of student ticket sales. He was referring to his goal of selling 3,000 student tickets to the Marshall University Invitational Basketball Tournament.

The Smith Hall lobby ticket table has sold-out twice and is using other area tickets, according to Alexander. However, he added that ticket sales have been moving relatively slow in Twin Towers lobby.

In attempting to push ticket sales, Alexander revealed that he has made arrangements with various establishments which cater to students to render discounts on merchandise to students presenting MUI ticket stubs following the Dec. 18-19 games.

Ticket sales will continue only through Tuesday, according to Dr. Alexander. After then, he added, it will be difficult to obtain a ticket.

The number of athletes who have signed letters-of-intent stands at five, following the signing of two football players Wednesday.

Steve Cooper, Winfield quarterback, and Wayne fullback-middle guard Jim Sanders signed to attend MU.

Cooper, 6-2 and 185 pounds, can play quarterback, defensive back and flanker.

Sanders, 6-3 and 216 pounds, plays fullback and defensive end. Previous signees were Charlie Miller, Monongah High School, and Ned Burkes, Martinburg High School.

Miller, 5-11 and 165, is an offensive and defensive halfback, while Burkes, 5-10 and 190, plays fullback.

Coach Red Dawson has also announced the signing of Dennie Harrah, 6-4 and 215 pounds, to a letter-of-intent.

Harrah comes from Stonewall Jackson High School and plays offensive center and defensive tackle.

Tryouts for women's basketball

Fourteen women will be chosen Jan. 7 for the women's intercollegiate basketball team, according to Donna Lawson, basketball coach and physical education instructor.

Tryouts for the team are still being conducted in the women's gymnasium. The next tryout will be Friday 4-6 p.m.

A definite tryout schedule can't be posted now because of conflicting activities in the women's gymnasium, although future tryouts will be held more consistently, according to Miss Lawson.

Twenty-four women have been attending tryouts. The majority of these are physical education majors, although several non-physical education majors are participating.

A basketball clinic will be held Saturday, Jan. 9 from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. in the women's gymnasium. Out of 343 invitations to participate sent to public schools in the Tri-State area, 20 instructors have responded saying they will bring one student.

Ten instructors plan to come and more participants are expected to reply at a later date.

A practice session, conditioning and drills will be conducted by MU's Women's Basketball Team. Dale Craycraft, assistant coach at Ceredo-Kenova High School, will show offensive and defensive strategy to the women. A scrimmage between the participants will be last on the agenda.

With a record of 7-0 last year, Marshall's women's basketball tentative schedule for 1970-71 is:

- Jan. 14--Morris Harvey College--Away--3:00
- Jan. 23--Ohio University--Away--1:00
- Jan. 30--Eastern Kentucky--Away--2:00
- Feb. 4--W. Va. State College--Home--5:00
- Feb. 6--Mt. St. Joseph--Home--2:00
- Feb. 12-13--Marshall University Invitational
- Feb. 18--W. Va. State--Away--5:00
- Feb. 20--Concord College--Away--1:00
- Feb. 27--West Liberty State College--Away--10:00
- Mar. 6--Morris Harvey--Home--1:00
- Mar. 20--Western Michigan University--Away--1:00
- Mar. 21--Western Michigan University--Away--10:00

Novice debaters meet Marietta this weekend

Novice debate teams will enter their last pre-Christmas tournament Friday and Saturday at Marietta College, Marietta, Ohio.

Debating the negative side of the national intercollegiate debate topic, "Resolved: That the federal government should adopt a program of compulsory wage and price controls," will be David Enochs, Williamson sophomore, Steven Fleming, South Charleston freshman, and Jessie Cook and Charlene Miller, Huntington freshmen.

Presenting the affirmative side of this topic will be Mary Stout, Marietta, Ohio, freshman, Bruce Tucker, South Point, Ohio, freshman, Trent Crewe, Princeton junior, and Paul Dick, Huntington freshman.

Volleyball team aims at crown

By KATHY McGINNIS
Sports writer

"We want to be state champs," was the unanimous cry from the women's intercollegiate volleyball team at a recent practice session.

Marshall will have a good chance at the crown when it participates in West Virginia's first annual volleyball tournament at West Liberty State College at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Other colleges in the tournament include: Concore College, Morris Harvey College and West Liberty.

"We've got a very good chance of winning the tournament," said Anne Abbott, coach and physical education instructor.

"The team at first looked like an elementary team, but now it's really polished and perfected. I'm very proud of them, especially after the game against Eastern Kentucky."

MU has an excellent chance of becoming state champs because it has defeated two of the three other participating teams.

Marshall beat Morris Harvey twice. In one match MU scored 15-11 and 15-8, and in the second match the scores were 15-0 and 15-9. West Liberty also fell to Marshall by scores of 15-8 and 15-6, although West Liberty won one game of the match 16-14. Although Concord College was on the schedule, MU was unable to play them due to a conflicting tournament.

Miss Abbott feels the women on the volleyball team don't receive the publicity and recognition they deserve.

Although this is only the team's second year of competition, Miss Abbott is able to interchange the players to any position. "That is quite a feat," she added.

Volleyball is more competitive down south, Miss Abbott said. The players noticed the difference when playing in tournaments at East Tennessee and West Georgia.

In West Virginia colleges, women are still fighting for recognition of women's sports, according to Miss Abbott. Most state colleges don't have an intercollegiate budget like Marshall does, or available facilities or willing coaches. There really isn't much competition in-state.

"It is detrimental for a team to play against a team that gives no competition," Miss Abbott said.

"It's not how great your facilities are, but how you use them," Miss Abbott said. Some schools have excellent facilities, but lock the doors to students.

The volleyball team has come a long way since last year. Only three matches were played and there were no uniforms. This year the schedule included many more matches and tournaments and new green uniforms were bought.

Beverly Duckwyler, Charleston junior and captain of the team, felt volleyball was worth the time put into it if an improvement is seen. And there has been an improvement. Miss Duckwyler also felt volleyball was a great way to meet people and become closer to the women on the team.

Managers switch for food service team

Change in cafeteria management is in process and should be completed by the end of Christmas break, according to Gordon Yingling, director of food services.

Frank X. Bower, manager of South Hall cafeteria, and Charles E. Moore, food production manager, will exchange positions, he said.

ARA Food Services, utilized by Marshall cafeterias, has initiated the change to give each man more experience in the Marshall unit, said Yingling.

"The change in positions is to enrich the backgrounds of these people, with the idea that they will be unit managers within a number of years."

Yingling explained that

Bower will be a technical assistant as food production manager, while Moore will become an administrative assistant as cafeteria manager.

This is an example of Food Service Training (FOSET), "personalized type of instruction" given to employees of ARA food units, said Yingling.

Championship pairings set for flag football tournament

Buddy Rogers, intramural director, has announced the tournament pairings for the flag football championship. In Monday's matchup, Lambda Chi Alpha No. 1 played Sigma Alpha Epsilon No. 2, Kappa Alpha No. 1 played Champs, Affa Kaffa Daffa played BUS, and Pi Kappa Alpha No. 2, played Sigma Alpha Epsilon No. 1.

In today's action, Sigma Phi Epsilon No. 1 plays the winner of the AKD-BUS game, Tau Kappa Epsilon No. 1 meets the winner of the Pike No. 2 SAE No. 1 contest, Pi Kappa Alpha No. 1 will go against the victor of the Lambda Chi No. 1 SAE No. 2 game, and Sigma Phi Epsilon will play the winner of the KA No. 1 Champs game.

Rogers also announced that basketball rosters are due Wednesday. He said he would like to have the teams playing each other before the Christmas break. Each team is allowed a maximum of 15 and a minimum of 12 players on each squad.

FUTURE MARSHALL GOLFERS

MU gains long hitters

By LARRY HURLEY
Sports writer

Three long hitters, two freshmen and a sophomore transfer from the University of Tennessee, will be trying to fill Marshall golf vacancies created by the loss of two seniors from last year's squad.

Reginald Spencer, golf coach, said, "We lost two seniors from last year's squad, so we have to use the strength of these new players to fill in their vacancies. All three are long hitters, and with length of courses increasing they should really help us."

"Jim should help us this year through his competitive background and experience. Frantz is a very consistent golfer and a long hitter, and Booth is a dedicated golfer and also long off the tee."

Justice, a transfer student from the University of Tennessee, has a lot of experience under his belt. He won the state junior tournament at the age of 16, and went to the nationals event at Oklahoma. As a sophomore and junior, he was a medalist in the regional high school tournament, and he has won the Black Knight Invitational Tournament at Beckley the last three years.

He said one of his biggest thrills was teaming with Sam Snead to win a tournament at Beckley.

"I think my experience and iron play will be my biggest contribution to the team," he said. "I've played in a lot of competition and this has helped me a great deal."

Justice, as well as the other two golfers, said they liked to play under Spencer.

"The coach used to be a professional and he really knows the game. He understands your problems and will work individually in trying to iron out troubled spots."

Booth, a 1970 graduate of Huntington High School, won several Jaycees Tournaments in Marietta, Ohio, and also won the junior club championship. He placed third in the regional and state high school tournaments.

He feels his biggest asset is hitting the greens in regulation, as well as his long hitting.

"I played in a few tournaments this summer, so I have a little experience," he said. "This and consistency should be my biggest contribution to the team."

He expressed optimism concerning the team's chances of victory this year. "We should have a pretty good team this year. We have a lot of good golfers, and I think next year's team will be even better."

When asked about this year's schedule, he said, "There will be some head-on matches offering some good stiff competition. They will be interesting and competitive."

Frantz also received a scholarship offer from West Virginia University.

Asked why he chose Marshall instead, he said, "I guess Joe Feaganes was the one who really got me interested. We discussed going to Marshall and when I got this grant-in-aid I decided to come. I guess living here was another reason for my picking Marshall."

Termed "a dedicated golfer" by Spencer, Frantz placed high in several state high school events, and finished sixth in the West Virginia State Open.

"I guess consistency and my iron play are my biggest assets. I hope I can make a good contribution to the team through these assets," he said.

Asked how he likes Marshall, he said, "It's good academically, but the sports program seems to be down on the spring sports. I think a little more emphasis should be placed on baseball, swimming, wrestling and golf."

ASA APPLE SALE

Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority will sell candied apples for Mental Health Foundation in dorms and on campus 7-9 p.m. Monday.

Winter conditioning drills begun by baseball team

Marshall University's baseball team has begun winter conditioning drills and will continue until the beginning of Christmas vacation.

Drills consist of calisthenics and running. They are designed to get the players active again according to baseball coach Jack Cook.

"After fall practice the players tend to gain weight and their activity is slowed down. Winter drills help them maintain the conditioning gained during fall practice," he added.

Indoor practice will start in February and will take the team up to outdoor practice in early March. "We have hopes of practicing on the Astro Turf at Fairfield Stadium in late February and early March in an attempt to get in some outdoor hitting practice," Cook said. "In the past we have had difficulty getting good hitting practice early in the season."

When asked about the team's strong points and weak points, Cook replied, "Defensively we will be adequate and we should have adequate hitting. However, our biggest problem will be depth in pitching."

He also said the forty game schedule and the Bowling Green Classic will present a pitching problem.

Program seeks speakers

By JULIE MERCER
Staff reporter

As a supplement to newly-initiated sex and drug programs, Miss Mary Louise Gallagher, assistant dean of students, has issued letters of request to faculty and administrative staff in hopes of finding speakers for these educational programs.

The letter, issued Dec. 8, indicates the need of "people who would be willing to conduct informal talks, be members of panel discussions following films on drug abuse or human sexuality."

An enclosed form for interested staff members to fill out should be returned to Dean Gallagher. The forms will be compiled and made available to resident directors and presidents of student groups. The master list will be kept on file for student use.

Dean Gallagher also stresses her particular interest if staff members separately or with their spouse would "feel qualified to talk in the areas of drugs, drug abuse, human sexuality, family planning or other topics related to sex and drugs."

She also urges interested members not to restrict themselves to these areas. "We need people to talk in the areas of mass media, higher education, contemporary social problems, vocational possibilities the various academic areas," the letter stresses.

The specific programs are planned for residence halls, off campus houses, and Greek houses.

Miss Gallagher recently spoke informally at the standards meeting of Sigma Kappa sorority, where she briefly mentioned plans for programs in sex and drug areas.

MU Choral Union will present its winter concert beginning Monday

The Marshall University Choral Union will present its winter concert at 8:15 p.m. Monday and Tuesday in Evelyn Hollberg Smith Recital Hall. The 180 singers will be accompanied by the Marshall Community Symphony with Dr. Paul A. Balshaw, director of choirs, conducting.

In commemoration of the Christmas Season, the group will present "Laud to the Nativity" by Respighi, a work of liturgical drama composed in 1930.

Soloists for the poetic text, describing the birth and adoration of Christ, will be Barbara Spitzer, Huntington graduate student, soprano; Marily Fedczak, Kenova junior, alto; and Robert Tweel, Huntington graduate student, tenor.

Also on the program, in observance of the bi-centennial of the composer's birth, is Ludwig von Beethoven's "Mass in C Major." Written in 1807, it was considered a major innovation in sacred music of that era.

Soloists for the mass are Robin S. Chandler, Huntington senior, soprano; Sharon King, Huntington graduate student, alto; James E. Pugh, Eccles sophomore, tenor; and Bert W. Bostic, St. Albans senior, bass.

The Choral Union, largest choral group at MU, is composed of members of two smaller singing groups, the A Capella Choir and Symphonic Choir; plus a number of townspeople, students and faculty. The Union presents a two-night concert each semester, one near Christmas and one at Easter.

The Respighi work will be presented over WMUL radio during the holidays, at a time to be announced.

The concert is open to the public without charge.
