Women protest 'Babes'

By NEAL BORGMEYER
Staff reporter

A proposal, by a Thundering Herd football coach that coeds use their intelligence and personality to attract top athletes to campus, brought protest Tuesday from a group of coeds who attacked it as "sexist."

The coeds sat outside Gullickson Hall holding signs and attracting much attention during the noon class changes. The signs read:

"We didn't come to MU to 'learn' to be 'date bait' for the football team."

"MU needs you. (Women wanted to be exploited by the Athletic Department). Be a token student."

WILL GO ON

Red Dawson, assistant football coach and organizer of the "Buffalo Babes," -- the program under attack -- stated, "I think they're silly."

He added, "The ones who are out there protesting couldn't help us anyway. The program will go on as planned."

"As a woman on Marshall's campus, I was extremely indignant to see that the Athletic Department is backing a move to exploit women on this campus in an effort to recruit athletes," stated Patricia O'Connor, Bluefield senior and member of the "spontaneous irritation," the name Miss O'Connor gave the women protesters.

"As a woman at MU my primary purpose is higher learning. It infuriates me that this 'sexist' institution will not allow women on their sports teams and will not hire women in executive positions. Their audacity to attempt to use women to secure athletes is another example of this 'sexist' institution's systematic exploitation of another 'nigger class' -- women."

Coach Dawson left his office and came partially down the stairs apparently to see what the protesters were doing, but he never came outside to confront them.

MIXED VIEWS

However, Coach Robert Saunders, came out and exchanged comments with the protesters over the use of "athletic department" on the signs rather than "football." In announcing plans for the "Buffalo Babes," Dawson viewed the proposal as not a lonely hearts club, but an organization of personable, intelligent girls to show prospective athletes and their families around campus, greet visiting teams, dating prospective athletes and working in the football office the morning of games.

He said similar programs had been used successfully at other schools. An organizational meeting was scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday in Gullickson Hall.

Filing begins - Senate half full

Gant thinks student Code 'okeh' in part

By WAYNE FAULKNER
Editor-in-chief

Fall Student Government elections will be held Oct. 14 with all class officers and half the Senate seats up for grabs, according to Michael Gant, student body president.

Filing for the election will be held Sept. 28 to Oct. 2 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Student Government office in the Shawkey Student Union.

Filing fee will remain $2 for both Senate and class officer candidates.

According to Gant, a meeting of all the candidates will be held Oct. 7 at 9 a.m. in SH 154 (Smith Hall Auditorium). He also pointed out that campaigning will not begin until Oct. 11 at noon. "No signs, no posters, no printed material may be put up before this time."

Gant said any changes to be made in the election rules will be dealt with by the elections commission headed by John Marshall, Middletown, Ohio, junior, with Glen Allen, Huntington sophomore as coordinator.

Gant explained that half the Senate seats will be contested this fall in compliance with the new student constitution passed last year which provides for staggered Senate terms.

"This way we will have fresh ideas as well as continuity in the Senate." Gant urged all students, especially freshmen, to get involved in the elections "since this is the first time we've had general elections in the fall. This election will be important. The only difference in this election is that the president and vice president will not be running."

Gant also announced that the academic affairs commissioner position is vacant with the resignation of Don Ross, Huntington senior.

According to Gant, Ross "is a pre-med student and just couldn't handle so much extra work."

Previewing the student government outlook for the year, Gant commented on a possible change in upcoming activities. "I'm not sure whether we're going to have high school visitation because there are some doubts in the Senate's mind and in my mind whether student money should be pumped into a high school visitation program."

Gant listed the reactivation of the student lobbyist group and the naming of a teacher evaluation coordinator as important matters on the agenda.

Five-week summer term is favored

Two five-week summer school terms were favored in a survey of students and faculty taken this summer and released this week by the Academic Planning and Standards Committee.

For the preferred length of summer school, 577 students and 47 professors voted for a 10-week term, 133 students and eight professors for a nine week term and 300 students and eight professors for an eight week term. One professor voted for a 12 week term.

For the preferred organization of summer school, 580 students and 47 professors voted for two five-week terms, 99 students and eight professors voted for one nine-week term, 34 students and three professors voted for one five and one four-week term, 140 students voted for two four-week terms and seven students and one professor voted for one three and one five-week term.

In spite of the popularity of the 10-week summer school, committee members felt it impossible because of late public school closing and early fall semester starting dates.

Committee members were considering two concurrent terms of varying lengths for an eight week term and one six week term for teachers.

'Et Cetera' available

Is code 'student' policy?

According to Dr. Constantine W. Curris, director of student personnel programs, Marshall University will be following its own student-faculty formulated code, but the fact remains that a good number of Marshall students had to sign a slip of paper acknowledging receipt of the code in order to register. Also, as a member of the community of colleges and universities in West Virginia, Marshall cannot isolate itself from policies affecting the other schools, especially when so many students consider such a policy as the student code of conduct so objectionable.

The Parthenon feels that all controversial sections of the code aside, and without even looking at the code itself, the students have a right to ask how such a policy was formulated.

Dr. Prince Woodard, chancellor of the Board of Regents, in a talk Sunday before a student-faculty panel, was asked how the code was formulated—who was contacted, what sources were used for information. Dr. Woodard replied that the Board had read "national publications and reports of national groups" in formulating the policy.

This seems odd to The Parthenon that a public legislature-created group (the Regents) formulating public policy (the code), would not see fit to ask the public its opinion, not to interview students, legislators, faculty members, and other representatives of those affected by the code. Are we to assume that the members of the Board of Regents are so educated, so knowledgeable, so self-sufficient that they found it unnecessary to ask those to be affected by the code to testify?

If every word in the code were perfect (which it is not) we feel students have the right to complain that the code was drawn up in a near arbitrary fashion.

We ask the Board of Regents—how is it possible to formulate student policy without asking students? It is no more possible to do this than it is to formulate policy on blacks without blacks' opinions, or on welfare recipients without asking those on welfare about their problems.

In conclusion, we feel that the Board of Regents, no matter how educated or well-meaning, should not have alone formulated public policy without consulting the public.

Parthenon letter policy

Do you want to write a "letter to the editor?" Here's how:

The letter must be signed. It must be in good taste—in the judgment of The Parthenon. It cannot be libelous (that is defame someone's good name and reputation).

The Parthenon reserves the right to correct spelling and language, to condense letters without changing their meaning and to reject any letters.

The letter should be typed (double-spaced) and the writer must then present it in person to an editor of The Parthenon who will ask to see your ID card. This precaution is taken to prevent bogus letters from appearing in the newspaper.

DIRECTOR NEEDED

The Student Center Programs Board is looking for a new Cinema Arts Director. Interested persons are asked to contact Donna Gassaway in Room 407, or call at 696-9115.

Library hours increase for fall

New library hours for the fall semester have been announced by Harold W. Apel, head librarian.

The hours are: Sunday 2 - 10 p.m.; Monday - Thursday 8 a.m. - 10 p.m.; Friday 8 a.m. - 10 p.m. and Saturday 8 a.m. - 5 p.m.

The difference between this and previous semesters, Apel said, is the Friday hours.

Apel said that the new hours will remain in effect as long as students take advantage of them.

HONORARY TO MEET

Alpha Beta Alpha, library science honorary, will meet at 6:30 p.m. today in the Campus Christian Center.

Hoof Beats

By JEFF NATHAN
Sports editor

Success is a relative thing. After years of virtually no idea of what the word meant, Marshall fans were suddenly treated to three straight wins last year. Everyone was ecstatic, and with good reason. Almost three years without a win can cause quite a hunger for victory.

Last year success meant three victories, but this year it's taken on a completely new meaning. With one foe conquered and nine more to go, many fans have become obsessed with winning and are counting on an undefeated season.

A possibility, I must admit. But what happens if the Herd loses? Will all those Die-hard fans who have been filling Fairfield Stadium since the winning streak began, desert the Herd to head for greener pastures? Hopefully not.

As we've all been told many times, a football coach is hired to build a program and can't be expected to become a NCAA champion in one or two years.

Success is relative. After past accomplishments, a season of seven or eight wins would have to be considered successful.

The Herd will not become an Ohio State over night, and hopefully the majority of fans will see this. With more patience and more support, the day of the Thundering Herd football dynasty could become a reality in the foreseeable future.

Wrestling too, appears to be on the upswing, Youth, enthusiasm, and talent enters the program in the form of new head coach Mike Sager.

A three-time All-American, Sager is only in his early 20's, but has already proven himself while an assistant coach at Ohio University. In his two years there, OU vaulted from no where to the ninth place team in last year's NCAA championships.

His wrestlers are equally enthusiastic about his presence, and many new things are planned for this year. Several tournaments, will include MU wrestlers, and a tentative plan which I personally endorse is wrestling matches before varsity basketball games. Such a proposal could create a real interest in the program. All persons interested in wrestling should attend a meeting in GH Auditorium 4 p.m. today.

*****

Shorts. . . The recent renovation of Fairfield Stadium uncovered some valuable or at least unusual old junk from what was formerly the city dump. Among the things found were brown Coke bottles which were last used around 1918, according to Huntington Coca-Cola Bottlers. . . Marco, MU's live mascot hasn't reached 500 pounds yet, but full-grown buffaloes have been known to reach 2000 pounds. . . Robert Clark and the MU Marching Band deserve credit for a fine program put on at the Morehead game with only two days of practice. The majorettes also did a fine job.

First for women's tennis

Marshall's first women's intercollegiate tennis team plays its first match today against West Virginia State College at Institute.

Five women who will be playing are Beth Balhatchet, Clarksburg senior; Sandra Burge, St. Albans sophomore; Carolyn Connor, South Charleston freshman; Bobbi Crews, Pineville senior, and Jody Fraley, Beckley freshman.

Due to lack of publicity, the entire team has not been chosen. Dr. Dorothy Hicks, coach, and chairman of the women's physical education dept. said the best players aren't out and tryouts are still being conducted.

A match with Concord is scheduled here at 1 p.m. Saturday. Other scheduled matches include Morris Harvey, Eastern Kentucky and Alderson Broaddus.

This is Marshall's first women's tennis team because there is now an intercollegiate budget. Dr. Hicks said "this is just a start."

Practice for the team is 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

55 new athletes receive grants

Fifty-five new athletes are on scholarship this year, according to the Athletic Department.

Athletic Director Charles Kautz said 37 are football players, nine of them junior college transfers eligible to play this year.

Three freshmen and two junior college transfers are on basketball scholarships and four are on baseball scholarships.

The remaining scholarships are divided between the golf and track teams.

Conference affiliation conceivable

It is conceivable that Marshall may join another athletic conference, according to Gene Morehouse, sports information director.

Morehouse said MU is currently drifting in a "state of limbo" as to remaining an independent or becoming affiliated with a conference. "But, we would be receptive to any conference bids," Morehouse said.

However, this statement conflicts with former President Roland Nelson's statement that MU would remain an independent until 1973. Morehouse, however, said he felt Nelson's statement should be interpreted to mean Marshall would not actively pursue a conference membership.

No formal overtures have been made by Marshall to any conferences and no conferences have made any formal advances toward Marshall, according to Morehouse.

Change of a more definite nature will occur Oct. 23 when Marshall's Thundering Herd comes off its one-year National Collegiate Athletic Association suspension. Lifting of the suspension enables MU to participate in a post-season bowl game this year, should it receive a bid.

'We wanted to win--'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following story is a first person account of the scene in the Thundering Herd dressing room before last Saturday's football game with Morehead State. The writer is Richard Dardinger, Mount Vernon, Ohio, senior, offensive center and The Parthenon feature writer.)

By RICHARD DARDINGER
Feature writer

We were excited. A team's opening game is always a big one, but this year's opener was really big. With a new Astro-Turf playing surface, a packed house, and the promise that West Virginia's Governor Arch A. Moore Jr. would talk to us before the game, there wasn't a player, coach or manager who wasn't up for this one.

All our pre-game preparations were completed and we were sitting around the locker room talking, getting each other "psyched up". Just before time to go out, Coach Tolley stepped to the center of the floor, there was complete silence. "Men, Governor Moore wants to say a few words to you today, Governor Moore." Every man in the room stood as we applauded the Governor.

I remember thinking that he looked just like I had seen him on television, and I wondered if he would string together a long line of football cliches and bore us into playing a poor game.

"Please sit down," he began. "Men, I know there are many of you in this room who were not born or reared in West Virginia, but whether you like it or not, you are identified with West Virginia. Your decision to attend Marshall decided that, and Marshall and West Virginia are now a part of your future." He went on to tell us how important this game was to West Virginia as a whole state. He pointed out that we, as members of Marshall's football team, represented all of West Virginia. He told us that as Governor, he wanted us to know that he and all West Virginians were behind us. The Governor ended his talk by issuing the old challenge to "go out there and win"!

I guess I hadn't realized until then how many people were depending on us to win that game. Sure we wanted to win for ourselves, for Marshall, and for Huntington, but now we had to win. We had to win for West Virginia.

I've never been sure how much good pre-game pep talks do for a football team. Surely to play well a team must start "getting up" long before Saturday afternoon. Still, for me, the Governor's talk Saturday got me just a little more ready to play, and that can mean the difference between winning and losing.

CAMPUS BRIEFS

Assisting president concern of council

The University Council will hold its first meeting of the academic year, today at 8:10 a.m. in Old Main, room 107. The meeting will be closed to the press.

Primary order of business to be discussed is the council assisting acting President Dr. Donald Dedmon. According to Dr. Sam Clagg, chairman of the Council, "assisting Dr. Dedmon should be given top priority to insure that the University will continue operating on a smooth and efficient basis."

Dr. Clagg declined to comment on this years objectives, because, "items to be placed on the agenda will be decided at the first meeting," he explained.

Debate team to be organized

The first squad meetings for the novice debate team will be held at 3 p.m. today and Wednesday in SH 254.

The team will enter its first tournament October 16-17 at Morehead State University.

Anyone interested in debating should contact Dr. Ben W. Hope, debate coach and professor of speech, or Miss Jacqueline White, assistant debate coach and instructor of speech.

Sabbatical leave deadline Oct. 1

All faculty members interested in taking sabbatical leave for the 1971-72 academic year must submit applications to the vice president of academic affairs before October 1.

To be eligible, faculty members must have reached the rank of assistant professor, been a member of the staff for at least six years and at the end of the leave must return to Marshall for three years or return the full leave allowance.

MU cultural series schedule announced

A variety of cultural programs will be available to Marshall students this year, according to the Student Artists Series Office.

Artists Series performances are scheduled for 8:30 p.m. at the Keith-Albee Theater. Tickets may be obtained in Smith Hall Lounge the week prior to each performance.

Old Main Auditorium will host this year's Community Forums. Students will be admitted to the 8 p.m. performances with presentation of their activity cards.

Convocations will be presented at 11 a.m. in Old Main Auditorium. There is no charge.

The Community Artist Series at the Keith-Albee Theater will be open to Marshall students at a cost of $1 per performance. Tickets may be obtained at the Keith-Albee box office preceding each program.

Schedule of the Student Artists Series is: Sept. 30 - Buddy Rich Orchestra, Oct. 15 - "Zorba," Broadway musical; Nov. 11-1776, Broadway musical; Nov. 16 - Paul Mauriat Orchestra, Feb. 15 - Mason Williams, guitarist and singer; Mar. 11 - The Glen Yarbrough Show.

The schedule for Forums is: Oct. 8 - Abe Fortas, former supreme court justice; Oct. 20 - Stewart Udall, former Secretary of the Interior; Oct. 26 - I Pomeriggi Musicali di Milano, debut tour of America; Nov. 12 - Sebastian Cabot, distinguished actor; Nov. 19 - Alex Haley, award winning author; Nov. 30 - Gene Wiancko, "Mysteries of the Balkan World"; Jan. 22 - Dr. David Mozingo, international relations expert; Feb. 12 - Spence Grilly, "Colorful Copenhagen"; Mar. 5

- Curtis Nagel, "Portraits of the Orient"; Mar. 27 - Clay Francisco, "Russia in the 70's."

Convocations will be: Oct. 1 - Pat Paulson, humorist; Oct. 9 - The Irish Rovers, poetry, and music; Oct. 22 - Emme Kemp, singer - pianist - composer - lyricist; Nov. 12 - Olatunji, apostle of Africulture; Feb. 11 - Leonid Hambro, concert pianist - humorist; Feb. 25 - Los Indois Tabajaras, two guitars; Mar. 4 - Yass Hakoshima, a program of mime; Apr. 22 - Rod Colbin, actor - theatrical fencing master; April 29 - James Dickey, poet.

Series changes suggested

A subcommittee report recommending changes in the organization of the Marshall University Artist Series will soon be referred to the student-faculty committee on tuition and activity fees, according to Steve Hinerman, Huntington junior, and subcommittee member.

Hinerman said recommendations for changes in the artist series were based on a Student Senate report released last spring.

According to Hinerman the report must go back to the subcommittee on student activities fees for approval. If approved there it would be presented to the main committee on tuition and activity fees for final approval.
