Michael E. Cerveris is associate professor of music at Marshall University. He received his Bachelor of Science degree from the Juilliard School of Music, Master of Arts degree from Catholic University of America, and Doctor of Musical Arts from West Virginia University. He served four years as piano soloist with the U.S. Navy Band and Orchestra and has performed as soloist and with chamber groups in St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Atlanta, Harrisburg, Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, and Baltimore.

He has studied piano with Edward Steuermann at the Philadelphia Conservatory, Leon Fleisher at the Peabody Conservatory, and Herman Godes at West Virginia University.

At Juilliard, he received the Harold Gray Prize; at the Philadelphia Conservatory he was presented the Ezarman Drake Prize. His debut recital was sponsored by the Pittsburgh Concert Society.

Prior to coming to Marshall, he served on the faculties of Lebanon Valley College, Webster College, and as a graduate assistant at West Virginia University.

Since joining the Marshall music faculty last fall, he presented his mixed media production "An After Dinner Farrago", featuring the music and wit of Eric Satie. The production was enthusiastically received in Huntington and has been scheduled in Pittsburgh later this season.
