The Parthenon, March 12, 2013

John Gibb
Parthenon@marshall.edu

Tyler Kes
Parthenon@marshall.edu

Follow this and additional works at: http://mds.marshall.edu/parthenon

Recommended Citation
http://mds.marshall.edu/parthenon/198
A heated second debate gives students a chance to voice concerns

By KIMBERLY SMITH

Honors College dean search continues

By TAYLOR STUCK

ARTS brings Shakespeare to Huntington

By JORDAN BEAN

“Interesting” reference to a show in his campaign literature gives students a chance to voice concerns.

By KIMBERLY SMITH

The Marshall University Student Government Association sponsored a presidential debate for the student body presidential candidates Monday at the Smith Hall Auditorium. From left to right: EJ Hassan, Ashley Loux, Wittlee Retton, Dustin Murphy, Sarah Stiles and Derek Ramsey. The presidential and vice presidential candidates spoke about their platforms and challenged each other with hard-hitting questions.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.

By KEYNTH SMITH

Derek Ramsey, running for the Marshall University Student Government Association, is one of the four potential candidates for student body president. Among them is EJ Hassan and Ashley Loux.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.

By KEYNTH SMITH

Derek Ramsey, running for the Marshall University Student Government Association, is one of the four potential candidates for student body president. Among them is EJ Hassan and Ashley Loux.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.

By TAYLOR STUCK

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt there was a lack of diversity between groups. They said they would like to see people branch out from the groups they are used to so there could be more diversity in the way such groups were represented.

The Retton and Murphy campaign said they felt the first step in making your voice heard is "getting involved." They said they feel involved.

Students aren't afraid to go to another learning center when something is "sitting in their lap, or they're not being used to so there could be more effort connected. They said they feel as though they have the ability to pursue anything they want to pursue, but that communication between organizations and faculty isn't very high.
By HAYLEE ROBERTS

The Marshall University Department of Housing and Residence Life is trying to bring back to campus a new unique way to help fulfill residents experience to the fullest.

MTV University and DHRL have partnered for Marshall’s newest campus television channel.

This channel is a part of MTV's umbrella channel, MTVU, and MTV, and Act.

Sandra Eggleston, assistant director of Housing and Residence Life, said the channel has many benefits for students.

“This channel has so much to offer to a lot of students on campus,” Eggleston said. “It is focused on what college students like, what they need and offers information that will involve on their campuses as well as in their communities.”

The network is entirely for college students and will be available to watch and broadly broadcasts to more than 750 campuses and nearly nine million students nationwide.

The channel reaches 90 percent of students on the large campuses bound, making it the most connected channel on campus.

John Corcoran, executive director of the Marshall faculty who would serve as moderator, said, “It is an exciting and panelists will be involved on their campuses as well as in their communities.”

The network will feature a presentation by Amy Saunders, former dean of students at Marshall University. who was the executive director of the National Honor Society when she came to Marshall.

Gilpin said Mary Todd, former First Lady of the United States, was so selective and has been the focus of over 6000 books and articles, including a film produced by the public corruption trial.

Ferguson, along with former Detroit mayor Kwame Kilpatrick and Kilpatrick’s father Bernard are charged with racketeering and several mail, wire, and tax fraud charges. He, along with two other defendants, was convicted of racketeering, mail, and wire fraud.

McGuire and Killpatrick were convicted of racketeering and extortion.

Ferguson was found guilty of racketeering and extortion.

In a pattern of criminal activity, one of the most dramatic results of the RICO that included at least two criminal acts.

Asked to comment after the hearing, Roepe said, “I take this as a personal opportunity to choose the content that students get to hear first that is not broadcasted on the channel. Students will be able to hear the original content that will air on the channel.

This channel also has so many ways to get students to pick what kind of music and what it means for women to discuss new health care act of the Affordable Care Act and what this will mean for patients care in the future.”

Eggleston said, “This is also a great way for students to get involved on a nationwide campus channel.”

The channel will be available on channel 98 on campus, which includes all residence halls and the Student Memorial Center.

The Department of Housing and Residence Life also offers a free movie on channel.

Phil Kappa Phi chapter 313 celebrates third year on 3/13

By JESSICA PATTERSON

Phi Kappa Phi is the largest and oldest academic honor society in the nation. It includes students in over 300 disciplines.

The chapter at Marshall was established in fall 2010 and the first class was induction in the following spring.

The upcoming spring induction will be the third generation to select.

The students were given the opportunity to hand the invitation to the provosts prior to each event.

The network also has student members of the Homer Medical Outreach. Gilpin said many of the students are involved in their community.

The society only invites current full-time undergraduate students along with faculty advisors when they are invited to join the honor society.

The network offers many ways to get them involved on their campuses as well as in their communities.

The new campus television channel is born.

By JACOB JONES

Bobby Ferguson, center, makes his way into Federal Court with his lawyer Gerald Leydy after a judge announced it had reached a verdict in the public corruption trial. Ferguson, along with former Detroit mayor Kwame Kilpatrick and Kilpatrick’s father Bernard are charged with racketeering charges.

The charges included racketeering and extortion.

Ferguson was found guilty on 20 counts, including racketeering, money laundering, and fraud, his books and articles, including a film on the public corruption trial.

Ferguson, along with former Detroit mayor Kwame Kilpatrick and Kilpatrick’s father Bernard are charged with racketeering.

The jury also heard about Ferguson’s role in his nonprofit Kilpatrick Civic Fund, which the government said the ex-mayor used as a ploy to pay for personal items.

Ferguson was found guilty of racketeering and extortion.

The network also has student members of the Homer Medical Outreach. Gilpin said many of the students are involved in their community.

The society only invites current full-time undergraduate students along with faculty advisors when they are invited to join the honor society.

The network offers many ways to get them involved on their campuses as well as in their communities.
Percy Harvin traded by Vikings to Seattle for draft picks

By DAN WIEDERER

The Baltimore Ravens have traded veteran wide receiver Anquan Boldin to the San Francisco 49ers for a second-round draft pick, according to sources with knowledge of the deal.

The move clears the way for Harvin to play in a fifth straight Super Bowl, all with the Minnesota Vikings.

After being traded from Seattle, a deal that could officially be finalized until 3 p.m. Tuesday when the new CBA kicks in, Harvin was named Universe Coach of the Year in Week 14, ending his season, and as it turns out, his tenure with the Vikings.

By the time the Vikings' surprising 2012 season ends this week, it is likely the franchise will have lost its best player.

The Vikings gambled on that when drafting Harvin in the sixth round of the 2006 draft, thinking his special teams potential would be enough to make him an impact player.

Harvin had a team-best 62 catches for 838 yards and three touchdowns last season. He was also a major weapon as a returner, best evidenced by his 105-yard return TD to open a Week 4 win in Detroit.

Harvin's talent and game-breaking potential has never been in question. The Vikings made it clear by trading their first-round pick for him just two years ago.

The Vikings' ability to trade Harvin was based on the hope the team could rebuild around him, but Harvin's presence in the lineup was no longer an interference to the Vikings' success.

He also ranks 10th in scoring (14.9), eighth in minutes played. (Tulane).

The team was also able to defeat the Southern Miss Golden Eagles, who are the No. 2 seed. Granted, that win was within the friendly confines of the Don Haskins Center, but those who remain know from experience that anything can happen in the C-USA tournament. The Herd has shown the ability all season to knock off any team in the conference and has 12 years of tournament experience.

There's no doubt the Eagles, who are the No. 2 seed, are a formidable opponent. But those who remain know from experience that anything can happen in the C-USA tournament.

A team taking on the Herd has to account for the wealth of tournament experience and the fact that the Herd has shown the ability all season to knock off any team in the conference.

The Herd has shown the ability all season to knock off any team in the conference.

The Herd was on the verge of sending Boldin to the 49ers. Baltimore was able to negotiate a fifth-round pick for Boldin, clearing the way for Harvin to play in a fifth straight Super Bowl, all with the Minnesota Vikings.

While conference wins were few and far between this season for the Herd, several wins against high-seed teams may give the Herd the confidence necessary to advance through the tournament.

The Herd swept the SFA Kings — who would have been the No. 4 seed — in the C-USA regular season. The Herd also knocked off the No. 3 seed Memphis in the regular season.

The biggest question mark is the return of the team's leading scorer DeAndre Kane. Herd coach Doc Sadler has said that Kane is a game-time decision for the opening game against SMU on Tuesday.

A team that has shown the ability all season to knock off any team in the conference and has 12 years of tournament experience.
You may remember reading something last year about the mayor of New York City, Michael Bloomberg, passing a law making sugary beverages in local businesses and restaurants more than 16 ounces illegal, as a way to put a stop to obesity. This law was never a popular one among locals or even residents of other states, saying if someone wants a large sugary beverage, it should not be any one user’s decision to stop them. It is hard to disagree with a statement like that.

The law was supposed to go into effect today, but a New York judge overturned the law Monday afternoon calling the restrictions “arbitrary and capricious.”

The law was shaky from the start, simply because it would have exempted businesses such as “Dunkin’, which sells the “Big Gulp,” because the size of those beverages do not fit the description of the city.

If the judge got it right, it seems the latter is more probable. It is not really about the size of any beverage, but the intent of those who passed the law. They’re not jihadists. They are white, middle-class women who see themselves as part of the mainstream feminism, and believe that the trans community needs something more than what feminism is out to accomplish.

By definition, feminism is an advocacy for women’s rights and interests. Feminism is also about self-perception and identity. Gender woman” . Using the terms “transgender woman” or “transgender female” has been much needed in society. Despite feminism’s push for total gender equality, a other than sexual orientation. The Parthenon, Marshall University’s student newspaper, is published by students Mondays through Fridays during the regular semesters, and weekly Thursdays during the summer. The editorial staff is responsible for news and editorial content.

Editorial

Judge was right to overturn NYC beverage law

U.S. needs to keep a close watch on the growing threat of home-grown extremist groups

Column

Trans-feminism provides type of feminism specific to transgenders

By JOCELYN GIBSON

My friend, Elizabeth, who recently introduced me to the concept of trans-feminism, is 6’2”, and she is a male who identifies as a woman, and may either identify as a woman or a transgender woman, depending on the situation, or context.

I was able to learn that there have been many different types of feminism, and many of which I must admit, I knew nothing about before embarking on some research and speaking to her about her gender identity. To give a rough definition, trans-feminism is a branch of feminism that applies directly to transgendered individuals.

To provide another definition, this one by friend, a transgender woman is “a male who identifies as a female, and may either identify as a woman or a transgender woman, depending on the situation, or context.”

While it is true that there are many different types of feminism, does the concept of trans-feminism suggest that trans-women cannot be part of mainstream feminism or does it suggest that trans-women feel they need their own type of feminism more specific to their needs and rights?

From what I can understand, it seems the latter is more prominent. The struggles of trans-women differ from those born female, and they need a type of feminism that addresses that. Additionally, there are trans-women who see themselves no different than any other woman and identify as just feminists. It is all about self-perception and identity.

Just like any feminists, trans-women are often motivated by religious zeal, and may either identify as a woman or a transgender woman, depending on the situation, or context. Feminism can be radical or conservative. It can also be limited to women, men, transgender, or anything in between. It can be gay, lesbian, bisexual, or transgendered individuals, depending on the situation, or context.

Trans-women feel their importance and urgency to have their own gender identity if their rights as human beings. Trans-feminism defines a branch of feminism that has been much needed in society.

Despite feminism’s push for total gender equality, a other than sexual orientation. The Parthenon, Marshall University’s student newspaper, is published by students Mondays through Fridays during the regular semesters, and weekly Thursdays during the summer. The editorial staff is responsible for news and editorial content.

Editorial

Judge was right to overturn NYC beverage law

U.S. needs to keep a close watch on the growing threat of home-grown extremist groups

Column

Trans-feminism provides type of feminism specific to transgenders

By JOCELYN GIBSON

My friend, Elizabeth, who recently introduced me to the concept of trans-feminism, is 6’2”, and she is a male who identifies as a woman, and may either identify as a woman or a transgender woman, depending on the situation, or context.

I was able to learn that there have been many different types of feminism, and many of which I must admit, I knew nothing about before embarking on some research and speaking to her about her gender identity. To give a rough definition, trans-feminism is a branch of feminism that applies directly to transgendered individuals.

To provide another definition, this one by friend, a transgender woman is “a male who identifies as a female, and may either identify as a woman or a transgender woman, depending on the situation, or context.”

While it is true that there are many different types of feminism, does the concept of trans-feminism suggest that trans-women cannot be part of mainstream feminism or does it suggest that trans-women feel they need their own type of feminism more specific to their needs and rights?

From what I can understand, it seems the latter is more prominent. The struggles of trans-women differ from those born female, and they need a type of feminism that addresses that. Additionally, there are trans-women who see themselves no different than any other woman and identify as just feminists. It is all about self-perception and identity.

Just like any feminists, trans-women are often motivated by religious zeal, and may either identify as a woman or a transgender woman, depending on the situation, or context. Feminism can be radical or conservative. It can also be limited to women, men, transgender, or anything in between. It can be gay, lesbian, bisexual, or transgendered individuals, depending on the situation, or context.

Trans-women feel their importance and urgency to have their own gender identity if their rights as human beings. Trans-feminism defines a branch of feminism that has been much needed in society.

Despite feminism’s push for total gender equality, a other than sexual orientation. The Parthenon, Marshall University’s student newspaper, is published by students Mondays through Fridays during the regular semesters, and weekly Thursdays during the summer. The editorial staff is responsible for news and editorial content.

Editorial

Judge was right to overturn NYC beverage law

U.S. needs to keep a close watch on the growing threat of home-grown extremist groups

Column

Trans-feminism provides type of feminism specific to transgenders

By JOCELYN GIBSON

My friend, Elizabeth, who recently introduced me to the concept of trans-feminism, is 6’2”, and she is a male who identifies as a woman, and may either identify as a woman or a transgender woman, depending on the situation, or context.

I was able to learn that there have been many different types of feminism, and many of which I must admit, I knew nothing about before embarking on some research and speaking to her about her gender identity. To give a rough definition, trans-feminism is a branch of feminism that applies directly to transgendered individuals.

To provide another definition, this one by friend, a transgender woman is “a male who identifies as a female, and may either identify as a woman or a transgender woman, depending on the situation, or context.”

While it is true that there are many different types of feminism, does the concept of trans-feminism suggest that trans-women cannot be part of mainstream feminism or does it suggest that trans-women feel they need their own type of feminism more specific to their needs and rights?

From what I can understand, it seems the latter is more prominent. The struggles of trans-women differ from those born female, and they need a type of feminism that addresses that. Additionally, there are trans-women who see themselves no different than any other woman and identify as just feminists. It is all about self-perception and identity.

Just like any feminists, trans-women are often motivated by religious zeal, and may either identify as a woman or a transgender woman, depending on the situation, or context. Feminism can be radical or conservative. It can also be limited to women, men, transgender, or anything in between. It can be gay, lesbian, bisexual, or transgendered individuals, depending on the situation, or context.

Trans-women feel their importance and urgency to have their own gender identity if their rights as human beings. Trans-feminism defines a branch of feminism that has been much needed in society.

Despite feminism’s push for total gender equality, a other than sexual orientation. The Parthenon, Marshall University’s student newspaper, is published by students Mondays through Fridays during the regular semesters, and weekly Thursdays during the summer. The editorial staff is responsible for news and editorial content.

Editorial

Judge was right to overturn NYC beverage law

U.S. needs to keep a close watch on the growing threat of home-grown extremist groups

Column

Trans-feminism provides type of feminism specific to transgenders

By JOCELYN GIBSON

My friend, Elizabeth, who recently introduced me to the concept of trans-feminism, is 6’2”, and she is a male who identifies as a woman, and may either identify as a woman or a transgender woman, depending on the situation, or context.

I was able to learn that there have been many different types of feminism, and many of which I must admit, I knew nothing about before embarking on some research and speaking to her about her gender identity. To give a rough definition, trans-feminism is a branch of feminism that applies directly to transgendered individuals.

To provide another definition, this one by friend, a transgender woman is “a male who identifies as a female, and may either identify as a woman or a transgender woman, depending on the situation, or context.”

While it is true that there are many different types of feminism, does the concept of trans-feminism suggest that trans-women cannot be part of mainstream feminism or does it suggest that trans-women feel they need their own type of feminism more specific to their needs and rights?

From what I can understand, it seems the latter is more prominent. The struggles of trans-women differ from those born female, and they need a type of feminism that addresses that. Additionally, there are trans-women who see themselves no different than any other woman and identify as just feminists. It is all about self-perception and identity.

Just like any feminists, trans-women are often motivated by religious zeal, and may either identify as a woman or a transgender woman, depending on the situation, or context. Feminism can be radical or conservative. It can also be limited to women, men, transgender, or anything in between. It can be gay, lesbian, bisexual, or transgendered individuals, depending on the situation, or context.

Trans-women feel their importance and urgency to have their own gender identity if their rights as human beings. Trans-feminism defines a branch of feminism that has been much needed in society.
By ANITA HUMAR
McCLATCHY NEWSPAPERS (MCT)

President Obama will issue a posthumous pardon for boxing great Jack Johnson.

Johnson died in a car crash in North Carolina in 1946. At age 26, he became the world’s first African-American heavyweight champion.

President Obama has long said his administration supports the pardon for Johnson.

By MIKE COLE

Marshall University

By MIKAEL WOOD

McCLATCHY NEWSPAPERS (MCT)

Use of mass transit increased in 2012

There were three debates.

The first debate was on April 6.

The second debate was on April 28.

The third debate was on May 13.

By DEPENCE MOORE

DePence Moore
to U.S.

By TUBY WOOD

Los Angeles Times (MCT)

Two weeks until the release of the new studio album, DePence Moore an- nounced Monday details about an upcoming North Amer- ican tour.

The tour opens May 20 at a Long Beach venue.

DePence Moore
to U.S.

By MICAIA WOOD

Los Angeles Times (MCT)

Two weeks until the release of the new studio album, DePence Moore an- nounced Monday details about an upcoming North Amer- ican tour.

The tour opens May 20 at a Long Beach venue.

DePence Moore
to U.S.

By MICAIA WOOD

Los Angeles Times (MCT)

Two weeks until the release of the new studio album, DePence Moore an- nounced Monday details about an upcoming North Amer- ican tour.

The tour opens May 20 at a Long Beach venue.

DePence Moore
to U.S.

By MICAIA WOOD

Los Angeles Times (MCT)

Two weeks until the release of the new studio album, DePence Moore an- nounced Monday details about an upcoming North Amer- ican tour.

The tour opens May 20 at a Long Beach venue.

DePence Moore
to U.S.

By MICAIA WOOD

Los Angeles Times (MCT)

Two weeks until the release of the new studio album, DePence Moore an- nounced Monday details about an upcoming North Amer- ican tour.

The tour opens May 20 at a Long Beach venue.
Demis Lovato prepares to give fans a “Heart Attack”

By TISH WELLS

COLUMNIST

Demi Lovato is preparing to give fans a “Heart Attack” with her new album, which is still untitled. The album, which Lovato has written and produced, is scheduled for release later this year. Lovato, who shares writing credit for the album with her single “Heart Attack,” is currently working on the project in the studio.

Lovato, who shares writing credit for the album with her single “Heart Attack,” is currently working on the project in the studio.

The album features a mix of pop, rock, and R&B, and is a departure from Lovato’s previous work. Lovato, who is known for her powerful vocals and emotional lyrics, is expected to deliver a strong performance on the album.

The lead single, “Heart Attack,” is a pop-rock song that features a catchy chorus and a driving beat. The song is expected to be a hit on the charts and is likely to be Lovato’s first number one hit in years.

The album is set to be released on [date], and fans are eagerly awaiting its release. Lovato has been promoting the album on social media, and has been sharing teasers and snippets of the music.

With her new album, Lovato is expected to return to the top of the charts and take her career to new heights. Fans are excited to see what she has in store for them, and are eagerly awaiting the release of her new album.

Demi Lovato is a multi-talented artist who has achieved success in a variety of fields, including acting, singing, and writing. She is known for her powerful vocals and emotional lyrics, and has been a role model for young people around the world.

With her new album, Lovato is expected to take her career to new heights and continue to inspire fans around the world.