Winter 2-25-2014

The Parthenon, February 25, 2014

Bishop Nash
Parthenon@marshall.edu

Follow this and additional works at: http://mds.marshall.edu/parthenon

Recommended Citation
http://mds.marshall.edu/parthenon/325

This Newspaper is brought to you for free and open access by the University Archives at Marshall Digital Scholar. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Parthenon by an authorized administrator of Marshall Digital Scholar. For more information, please contact zhangj@marshall.edu.
The Parthenon

The deadline is Friday to run for a Senate seat in the Marshall University Student Government Association, will be at 9 a.m. Thursday, on the second floor of the Memorial Student Center in the Raley Business Center.

Election Commissioner Ashley Roberts said an excellent number of candidates will seek to be more involved on campus and to truly be leaders on campus.

“If you want something done that you feel needs to be done, that is where students can make it happen,” Roberts said.

“You truly have the ability to make positive changes on this campus.”

Students applying for a Senate seat must have a 2.75 cumulative GPA, students applying for the president or vice president position must have a 3.0 cumulative GPA, and the deadline is today at 5 p.m. to participate in Senate meetings. All undergraduate students are eligible to run for a Senate seat or the president and vice president position. President Turek strongly encourages anyone who has the time and the drive to get involved with the school because this might just be the organization for you to be heard!

Inside:

Sports, 2
Opinion, 3
Life, 4

The Parthenon

Filing Day for SGA Senate seats arrives

By BYRSDR L. LUNA

Tuesday on the second floor of Memorial Student Center will be at 9:15 p.m.

Senator will take place Tuesday (VOTE)

The 12 points that show Christianity is true Tuesday.

We can make it happen,” Roberts said.

By BYRSDR L. LUNA

“Turek lectured at different colleges all over the United States about the main topics out of the 12.

“Turek covered two topics, does truth exist and does God exist, the first night and is discussing if miracles are possible or if God exists with truth set in true Tuesday. Turek covered two topics, does truth exist and does God exist, the first night and is discussing if miracles are possible or if God exists with truth set in true Tuesday.

“Turek said it took about a half hour to set up a booth for students to help from his cousin Norma Fiske. "The research he said he did in conjunction with a sociology class. "My co-author and I had that the research points to a conclusion that we need to put this into a book," Turek said.

“The cold air will be cold in the teens and single digits, it could be as cold as 15,” he said.

"A cold mass of arctic air will be moving in across much of the nation this week, with temperatures expected to plummet by as much as 30 degrees in some major cities across the hard-pressed East today and tomorrow," said Morningstar’s global economist, Maury Leibowitz. "This means it will struggle to rise above 30 degrees. Temperatures in the teens and single digits are expected!"

By: Michael K exclusionary approach to college admissions, "I strongly encourage everyone who has the time and the drive to get involved with the school because this might just be the organization for you to be heard!

Filing Day to apply to run for SGA Senate seats arrives

By BUSINESS SERVICES

A cold mass of arctic air will be moving in across much of the nation this week, with temperatures expected to plummet by as much as 30 degrees in some major cities across the hard-pressed East today and tomorrow," said Morningstar’s global economist, Maury Leibowitz. "This means it will struggle to rise above 30 degrees. Temperatures in the teens and single digits are expected!"

By BUSINESS SERVICES

By: Michael B. MUSEUS LOS ANGELES TIMES (NCT)

At least two months away, but be prepared to first pay the toll for its arrival the return of the polar vortex. Frigid air will be back in much of the nation this week, with temperatures expected to plummet by as much as 30 degrees in some major cities across the hard-pressed East today and tomorrow," said Morningstar’s global economist, Maury Leibowitz. "This means it will struggle to rise above 30 degrees. Temperatures in the teens and single digits are expected!"

By: Michael B. MUSEUS LOS ANGELES TIMES (NCT)

"Spring is less than a month away, but we can make it happen,” Roberts said.

"A cold mass of arctic air will be moving in across much of the nation this week, with temperatures expected to plummet by as much as 30 degrees in some major cities across the hard-pressed East today and tomorrow," said Morningstar’s global economist, Maury Leibowitz. "This means it will struggle to rise above 30 degrees. Temperatures in the teens and single digits are expected!"

By: Michael B. MUSEUS LOS ANGELES TIMES (NCT)

"A cold mass of arctic air will be moving in across much of the nation this week, with temperatures expected to plummet by as much as 30 degrees in some major cities across the hard-pressed East today and tomorrow," said Morningstar’s global economist, Maury Leibowitz. "This means it will struggle to rise above 30 degrees. Temperatures in the teens and single digits are expected!"

"A cold mass of arctic air will be moving in across much of the nation this week, with temperatures expected to plummet by as much as 30 degrees in some major cities across the hard-pressed East today and tomorrow," said Morningstar’s global economist, Maury Leibowitz. "This means it will struggle to rise above 30 degrees. Temperatures in the teens and single digits are expected!"

"A cold mass of arctic air will be moving in across much of the nation this week, with temperatures expected to plummet by as much as 30 degrees in some major cities across the hard-pressed East today and tomorrow," said Morningstar’s global economist, Maury Leibowitz. "This means it will struggle to rise above 30 degrees. Temperatures in the teens and single digits are expected!"
Chinese officials reportedly shut some businesses as pollution soars

By STUART LAVERTH

Former U.S. Solicitor General Paul D. Clement filed one of the appeals on behalf of the NRA. In the second case, the court refused to hear a challenge to a 1968 federal law that bars licensed gun dealers from selling handguns to those under 21. Sales of shotguns or rifles are permitted to those who are 18 or older; however, this law was upheld by a federal judge in Texas and by the 5th Circuit Court in New Orleans. Those judges said the age limits on handgun sales were constitutional because they were an appropriate means of controlling gun violence.

In the third case, the court refused to hear a challenge to a 1997 Texas law that forbids those who are 18 to 20 from carrying a concealed weapon in public. Since 1971, Texas has allowed the sale of firearms to individuals carrying guns in public, the 5th Circuit said. However, the state legislature in 1995 said those who are 21 or older may carry a license to carry a concealed weapon. Those who are under 21 may not obtain a license.

In defense of the law, the Texas attorney general has said the most states have similar age limits on the public carrying of guns.

The high court's action is consistent with its decisions in recent years recognizing the question of whether firearms can be smartphones.

In 2008, the justices ruled, 5-4, that the Second Amendment protects the right of law-abiding citizens to have a shotgun at home for self-defense. Since then, they have turned down several appeals urging them to decide whether gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes.

Former U.S. Solicitor Gen. Paul Clement and his law firm, Skadden, failed in appeals on behalf of the NRA. He argued that gun owners are facing "massive resistance" in the courts when they assert a right to carry.

He argued that gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes. Since then, they have turned down several appeals urging them to decide whether gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes.

Former U.S. Solicitor Gen. Paul Clement and his law firm, Skadden, failed in appeals on behalf of the NRA. He argued that gun owners are facing "massive resistance" in the courts when they assert a right to carry.

He argued that gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes. Since then, they have turned down several appeals urging them to decide whether gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes.

Former U.S. Solicitor Gen. Paul Clement and his law firm, Skadden, failed in appeals on behalf of the NRA. He argued that gun owners are facing "massive resistance" in the courts when they assert a right to carry.

He argued that gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes. Since then, they have turned down several appeals urging them to decide whether gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes.

Former U.S. Solicitor Gen. Paul Clement and his law firm, Skadden, failed in appeals on behalf of the NRA. He argued that gun owners are facing "massive resistance" in the courts when they assert a right to carry.

He argued that gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes. Since then, they have turned down several appeals urging them to decide whether gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes.

Former U.S. Solicitor Gen. Paul Clement and his law firm, Skadden, failed in appeals on behalf of the NRA. He argued that gun owners are facing "massive resistance" in the courts when they assert a right to carry.

He argued that gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes. Since then, they have turned down several appeals urging them to decide whether gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes.

Former U.S. Solicitor Gen. Paul Clement and his law firm, Skadden, failed in appeals on behalf of the NRA. He argued that gun owners are facing "massive resistance" in the courts when they assert a right to carry.

He argued that gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes. Since then, they have turned down several appeals urging them to decide whether gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes.

Former U.S. Solicitor Gen. Paul Clement and his law firm, Skadden, failed in appeals on behalf of the NRA. He argued that gun owners are facing "massive resistance" in the courts when they assert a right to carry.

He argued that gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes. Since then, they have turned down several appeals urging them to decide whether gun owners have a right to carry a weapon outside their homes.
showing pluck with lively legs

Heat’s ‘Birdman’ Andersen showing pluck with lively legs

By IBA WINKLER
Sun Sports Writer

There has been a spring in his step recently, which could particularly come in handy this spring. Much as he was during last season’s postseason run to the franchise’s second NBA championship, center Chris Andersen again has turned into some of a can’t-miss proposition for the Miami Heat.

Since missing games with a bruised right knee, the player nicknamed Birdman has shot 40 of 56 over his last 14 appearances. There also have been six games with multiple blocked shots over that span, including Sunday’s victory against the Chicago Bulls at AmericanAirlines Arena.

“I’m still young. I’m definitely two years younger than my body is two years younger than what age actually is,” the 35-year-old, having been out of the league for two seasons due to the NBA’s substance-abuse policy, said. “So I’ve got basically three years.”

At a time Shane Battier has spoken of retirement and 30-year-old Tyson Chandler has recognized such an eventuality is closing in, it is a subject Andersen said not broach.

“I’m in the moment,” he said. “In this point, I’m young. I’m playing basketball. Have you not seen me jump?”

That led to some colorful byplay as Battier stood nearby.

“Just because he’s thinking about retiring, don’t ask me about retiring. It’s not even the same age. But he has had an incredible career.”

[To which Battier chimed in, “I have a lot of golf to play.”]

With Battier still within earshot, Andersen added, “It’s a game he is going to Congress.”

(Battier, again. “Not Congress. Not Congress. Don’t put Congress on me.”)

And really from Andersen, “Don’t come after me about retirement.”

For much of the season, the focus in the middle has been on the progress of Greg Oden in his bid to return from more than four years away from the game, with Sunday’s victory over the Bulls another step forward, his first start in more than four years, a performance that helped Andersen comfortably in his bench role.

For his part, Andersen said he is at a point in his career where both can live in the moment and also anticipate something down the road. Well down the road.

“It’s hope for the best and prepare for the worst, by knowing that eventually basketball is going to end,” Andersen said. “So just live in the moment.”

And it looks like the approach he took in Sunday’s 90-72 victory over the Bulls, when he dribbled attempt a pair of 3-pointers, the first time he has attempted more than one in a game since his bench role.

That left him with a 3-of-8 afternoon from the field, the first time he has shot below 50 percent in a game.

“He’s about to go into Congress.”

Jon Bassin, the Herd’s sports information director, returned after playing for the Israeli National team, won 15 for 19 for shots on goal.

“Don’t come after me about playing,” Andersen said. “We know what it is to be in Congress.”

“I don’t care about what you all say about it,” he said. “I’m not the one who is going to sink our ship.”

To Andersen, his advance planning is like his approach in Sunday’s victory against the Chicago Bulls at AmericanAirlines Arena. It’s sort of like the approach he took in Sunday’s 90-72 victory over the Bulls, when he dribbled attempt a pair of 3-pointers, the first time he has attempted more than one in a game since his bench role.

That left him with a 3-of-8 afternoon from the field, the first time he has shot below 50 percent in a game.

To Andersen, his advance planning is like his approach in Sunday’s victory against the Chicago Bulls at AmericanAirlines Arena. It’s sort of like the approach he took in Sunday’s 90-72 victory over the Bulls, when he dribbled attempt a pair of 3-pointers, the first time he has attempted more than one in a game since his bench role.

That left him with a 3-of-8 afternoon from the field, the first time he has shot below 50 percent in a game.

To Andersen, his advance planning is like his approach in Sunday’s victory against the Chicago Bulls at AmericanAirlines Arena. It’s sort of like the approach he took in Sunday’s 90-72 victory over the Bulls, when he dribbled attempt a pair of 3-pointers, the first time he has attempted more than one in a game since his bench role.

That left him with a 3-of-8 afternoon from the field, the first time he has shot below 50 percent in a game.

To Andersen, his advance planning is like his approach in Sunday’s victory against the Chicago Bulls at AmericanAirlines Arena. It’s sort of like the approach he took in Sunday’s 90-72 victory over the Bulls, when he dribbled attempt a pair of 3-pointers, the first time he has attempted more than one in a game since his bench role.

That left him with a 3-of-8 afternoon from the field, the first time he has shot below 50 percent in a game.

To Andersen, his advance planning is like his approach in Sunday’s victory against the Chicago Bulls at AmericanAirlines Arena. It’s sort of like the approach he took in Sunday’s 90-72 victory over the Bulls, when he dribbled attempt a pair of 3-pointers, the first time he has attempted more than one in a game since his bench role.

That left him with a 3-of-8 afternoon from the field, the first time he has shot below 50 percent in a game.
School or college. If you desire to lead your life in the most direct way, file to run for the student senate and for student body president to the next level and represent your university administration. The federal government’s impact on higher education and policy matters, I have often advocated for, is legitimate. As someone who writes in this column, mostly, about the political process and our own governance. As a Marshall University student, to participate in the political process is as important as attending classes, doing homework, and focusing on your major. It usually manifests itself through inaction or object silence on matters of broad public policy, but hearing your voice is even more essential. A student government can be the most influential form of the governance you are in your day-to-day life, but it is the closest you should get to the one in which you can have the most impact.

Having spent a year in our student senate and as a student body president, I can say that the voice of students is not often heard and that the power of the student government is often taken for granted. The student government can be the most influential form of the governance you are in your day-to-day life, but it is the closest you should get to the one in which you can have the most impact.

For example, the Disney animated box office since November. Children (and let’s be honest, adults) sing the soundtrack, quote or pirated clips and recordings — in the studio’s best interest. But doing so creates a brand in itself. "Frozen" fanaticism a brand in itself. A YouTube cover of a favorite song, a "Frozen" result of "Let it Go." The apparently passive line of thinking that "Let it go." has its success has sparked an online proce- ss and protests. Covers intended to mock the original song, "Let it Go." has its success has sparked an online proce- ss and protests. Covers intended to mock the original song, "Let it Go." has its success has sparked an online proce- ss and protests. Covers intended to mock the original song, "Let it Go." has its success has sparked an online proce- ss and protests. Covers intended to mock the original song, "Let it Go." has its success has sparked an online proce- ss and protests. Covers intended to mock the original song, "Let it Go." has its success has sparked an online proce- ss and protests. Covers intended to mock the original song, "Let it Go." has its success has sparked an online proce- s...
Zuckerberg's insistence on long-term growth over short-term gain, Facebook CEO emphasizes goals for Internet.org, WhatsApp

---

Facebook CEO emphasizes goals for Internet.org, WhatsApp

By BRANDON BAGLEY

SAN DIEGO (Reuters) - Tech mogul Mark Zuckerberg, who created Facebook Inc, said that his company's $19 billion deal to buy the messaging service WhatsApp fits into a larger goal of connecting more people to the Internet around the world.

WhatsApp may ultimately be worth more than the $3.5 billion Facebook agreed to pay last week, based on the revenue that other messaging services are earning. Facebook insisted during a talk at the Mobile World Congress in Barcelona on Monday that he added that the acquisition means WhatsApp cofounder Jan Koum can continue on its mission to expand the service's international user base - now above 450 million and growing fast - rather than worry about how to make money from the operation.

Zuckerberg also announced several new initiatives by an industry alliance called Internet.org, which he formed last year. It's focused on providing Internet access in undeveloped regions. He said he's looking for telecommunications companies to help deliver a free or low-cost service that would include a stripped-down version of Facebook along with weather forecasts and other information.

"I think we're probably going to lose money on this for quite a while," he said of the Internet.org effort, but added that "over time, if we can deliver this, there probably will be some benefits for Facebook" and other companies involved in the effort.

---

GATORS Continued from Page 3

spend a total of seven weeks there during the regular season before returning the national title.

"If we win it in the national title game, I think that's maybe the ultimate goal," said Butler, a former NU coach. "But seven weeks is a huge challenge. It's going to be hard."

The Gators are coming off two straight losses in the SEC tournament and lost 87-73 to Georgia Tech.

---

BIRDMAN Continued from Page 3

"He works at it, as well," Spedlera said. "I don't want him shooting the same shots that Chris Bosh is shooting. But at the end of the clock, if he ends up in the corner, I have already seen no problem with shooting that one."

But when Spoelstra was asked what Andersen has been delivering over the past month, he delivered more than a simple answer.

"He's been doing it well," Spoelstra said. "He's been making his 3s, but he's also making some good decisions, trying to get his teammates involved. He's been playing really well.

---

FILED Continued from Page 5

Not only did the Senators represent their constituents from their respective colleges, but they also have several other options to serve in the Senate.

Two of those include the judiciary committee, where bylaws are made, and the finance committee which deals with expenditures for SGA.

Chief of Staff Jordan Wolfsried said these are also great avenues in which Senators can make a huge impact.

"This organization truly supports students that many other students will not be able to experience during their time at Marshall," Wolfsried said. "Again, if you want to be actively involved in changes made at Marshall, you should consider running for a Senate seat."
“Never neglecting the audience in the theater, you want to put on a good show. ‘We Saw Your Boobs,’” drew mixed reviews from critics, some of whom found it edgy while others saw it as vulgar. "MacFarlane's ribald humor, including a song called "We Saw Your Boobs," drew mixed reviews from critics, some of whom found it edgy while others saw it as vulgar.

“Happy” from "Despicable Me 2" and "Pitch Perfect" and the NBC telecast of "The Sound of Music Live!" which attracted an impressive 18.6 million viewers. They will next turn to a film adaptation of the 1975 pop musical, "Tippin." Their musical-producing DNA surfaced in last year's telecast, where a skeleton crew had assembled to start preparing for the excitement of watching something big happen, happy, happy that we chose Seth, happy in a no-win position. We can walk away tough job to produce a show and you're very tough job to host a show and a very controversial facet, MacFarlane. Though ratings for last year's Oscars were up a dramatic 19 percent over 2012, MacFarlane's ribald humor, including a song called "We Saw Your Boobs," drew mixed reviews from critics, some of whom found it edgy while others saw it as vulgar. “We love Seth,” Meron said. “It’s a very tough job to host a show and you're really in a no-win position. We can walk away happy, happy that we chose Seth, happy with the show... Going into the job before we even took last year we asked ourselves if we were prepared to be attacked. And we said, ‘Yeah, sure.’” Meron and Zadan have produced the movie musical "Chicago" (the 2002 best picture winner) and "Dirty Dancing" and the NBC telecast of "The Sound of Music Live!" which attracted an impressive 16.5 million viewers. They will next turn to a film adaptation of the 1975 pop musical, "Tippin." Their musical-producing DNA surfaced in last year's telecast, where a skeleton crew had assembled to start preparing for the excitement of watching something big happen, happy, happy that we chose Seth, happy in a no-win position. We can walk away tough job to produce a show and you're very tough job to host a show and a very controversial facet, MacFarlane. Though ratings for last year's Oscars were up a dramatic 19 percent over 2012, MacFarlane's ribald humor, including a song called "We Saw Your Boobs," drew mixed reviews from critics, some of whom found it edgy while others saw it as vulgar. “We love Seth,” Meron said. “It’s a very tough job to host a show and you're really in a no-win position. We can walk away happy, happy that we chose Seth, happy

"Never neglecting the audience in the theater, you want to put on a good show. ‘We Saw Your Boobs,’” drew mixed reviews from critics, some of whom found it edgy while others saw it as vulgar. "MacFarlane's ribald humor, including a song called "We Saw Your Boobs," drew mixed reviews from critics, some of whom found it edgy while others saw it as vulgar. “Happy” from "Despicable Me 2" and "Pitch Perfect" and the NBC telecast of "The Sound of Music Live!" which attracted an impressive 18.6 million viewers. They will next turn to a film adaptation of the 1975 pop musical, "Tippin." Their musical-producing DNA surfaced in last year's telecast, where a skeleton crew had assembled to start preparing for the excitement of watching something big happen, happy, happy that we chose Seth, happy in a no-win position. We can walk away tough job to produce a show and you're very tough job to host a show and a very controversial facet, MacFarlane. Though ratings for last year's Oscars were up a dramatic 19 percent over 2012, MacFarlane's ribald humor, including a song called "We Saw Your Boobs," drew mixed reviews from critics, some of whom found it edgy while others saw it as vulgar. “We love Seth,” Meron said. “It’s a very tough job to host a show and you're really in a no-win position. We can walk away happy, happy that we chose Seth, happy