“The is no one untouched. There is no one who can hear of this and not feel sorrow and grief. And we, the students, feel the pain so deeply that we cry...and cry... and wonder how, and why.” — Mike Gant, 1970 Student Body President (via Parthenon, Nov. 10, 1978)
The plane crash that took place Nov. 14, 1970 and killed 75 people has shaped the manner in which Marshall University has grown as a school and a community. Today, Marshall looks to honor those lost once again with a special keynote speaker, Fisher Cross, the grandson of two of the victims of that fatal crash, at this year's fountain ceremony at noon.

Now a student at Marshall, Cross has grown up with the university, explaining that his entire life has centered around this community, this school and this football stadium.

"At first, I was extremely nervous when my aunt asked me to do this," Cross, a senior sports management student, said. "I thought 'Why me? Why me? Why would I do this? I can't do this.'" He said he asked his mother and aunt as many questions as they could to be prepared for the speech.

"It's a bit complicated," Cross said. "I have to report on what I hear about my grandparents, his family kept their spirits alive, and, in preparing for this speech, he asked his mother and aunt as many questions he could in order to carry on their legacy.

Cross thought that though he never met his grandparents, his family kept their spirits alive, and, in preparing for this speech, he asked his mother and aunt as many questions as he could in order to carry on their legacy.

Fisher Cross will speak this year's7th annual ceremony in honor of two of his grandparents lost in the crash.

Despite the challenges of going to college, many working full-time jobs and providing for children. If student loans are no longer an option, college students may have nowhere to turn. Many working full-time jobs and providing for children. If student loans are no longer an option, college students may have nowhere to turn.

"If we can eliminate that, then they can devote more time to learning and studying. They can be better nourished, which helps to do those three things," Williams said.

Although Marshall University did not have a food pantry on campus, it closed in October 2016 due to accessibility problems.

"Let's bring back the food pantry," Cross said. "I thought 'Why me? My mom or aunt asked me to do this,' but I wanted to do this for my grandparents, their family kept their spirits alive, and, in preparing for this speech, he asked his mother and aunt as many questions as he could in order to carry on their legacy.

in the first half, but the Wildcats

son-opening win over Utah Valley

State Friday night. The Wildcats

Chicago. Kansas opened the seapions Classic on Tuesday night in threes and their guard play's un believable. It's got a really good team. And they're veterans, he's got veterans on that team that have been there and done that and so it will be a hard game for us to win. But it's another game, let's see, neutral floor. Top-5

team, where are they, they're 1, 2, 3, whatever they are, No. 1 in the country, whatever they are.
Where is a freshman team, playing on the road, against a team like that, where we are now.

ON POINT

Texas beat 0-15 against Southeastern Conference
teams. Overall, the Catamounts are 0-3 against Florida, 0-2 against Georgia and Vanderbilt. Kentucky was Vermont's first contest against a ranked opponent since 2007.

The Catamounts won 21 straight games last season before dropning to lose against an NCAA Tourney that is going to be a hard one this year and I thought in the first half we were really good. In the second half we weren't so good. The 50 percent

Staff Spotlight: Athletic Director of Marketing Tyler Able

By RICK FARLOW
FOR THE PARTHENON
Tuesday, November 14, 2017

Tyler Able, 28, is the director of marketing at Marshall University Athletics. Able graduated from the University of Kentucky in 2014, where he earned his bachelor’s degree in kinesiology and exercise science. In 2017, he earned his master’s degree in sport management at Florida Atlantic University. He has worked at Marshall since 2016. Reporter Rick Farlow recently interviewed Able using a style borrowed from the Marcel Proust/ Vanity Fair magazine format, which is designed to reveal the personal side of newsmakers.

Q: What is your most marked characteristic?
A: My most marked characteristic is the Rooster. I’m a morning person. I love to start my day early.

Q: What do you most value in your friends?
A: The thing I value most in my friends would be that they are honest with me. You will never get hurt being honest with me.

Q: What is the trait you most display in yourself?
A: I would say there’s one thing, I’m very laid back, I’m laid back. Playing sports, watching sports, being a fan, yes. When things don’t go my way, it’s just a downhill slope from there. In general, I’m just too emotionally invested. It comes from my competitiveness.

Q: What is your favorite occupation?

Q: What is your idea of perfect happiness?
A: Perfect happiness. Being surrounded by my family and friends anywhere in the world.

Q: What do you regard as the lowest depth of misery?
A: I would have to say being alone.

Q: What is your favorite sport?
A: I would say basketball.

Q: Who are your favorite heroes of fiction?
A: Perfectly, I would say Batman. It’s just awesome.

Q: Who are your favorite composers?
A: I would probably say Italy or Spain. I’ve always been infatuated with Batman’s growing up. It’s the ability to be human but also have the strength and power to save Gothenburg.

Q: What is your favorite heroine of fiction?
A: Cat Woman. Sleek and mysterious.

Q: What is your most marked characteristic?
A: My most marked characteristic is that I can be that day. I really focus on living in that day.

Q: Which talent would you most like to have?
A: Sing.

Q: How would you like to die?
A: Surrounded by family. Honestly, I don’t even know.

Q: What is your favorite state of mind?
A: Happy, Life’s good.

Q: What is your motto?
A: Every day I wake up, I try to be the best me I can be that day. I really focus on living in the present.

Geology Department to separate fact from science fiction in film series

By SEBASTIAN MORRIS

The American Museum of Natural History, a series of movie discussions sponsored by the Geology Department, will begin at 5 p.m. tonight at the old gym. The first film will be "An American Tail," starring voicings of Benjamin Feifer, Missy Kligman, and friends. "This is the last film in the series," said Mr. Morris. "The entertainment industry actually does well to bring attention to real, potential threats."

"We look at the movies critically from the standpoint of a geologist," said Mr. Morris. "Could this really happen?"

The series will continue in early Dec., when Morris plans to screen "The Day After Tomorrow." Mr. Morris added, "We could have an ice age in two months! That's reality!"

Marshall University band form a family tradition for two sisters

BY BROOKE GRIFFIN

THE PATHERON

The Marshall University band brings a sense of pride to the already exciting various sporting events and to the competitions they perform; but for one family, the pride is twofold. Sisters Mary and Grace Bunten have spent the past few months practicing and preparing for countless hours in order to be half-time show ready. Mary Bunten is a senior color guard and Grace Bunten is a freshman color guard member.

"I think it's so good to be able to do this with my sister," Mary Bunten said. "We have both worked so hard to get where we are, and now we get to do it together. Our parents are so proud of us, and I know my sister has just become the center of the people who surround her.

The sisters have both been performing since they were young and this is the second time they have both been able to perform in a band together, the last being in high school.

"It's good to know someone has my back at all times," Grace Bunten added. "I can look up through the years, and this year is no different. I have so much to learn from her this year before she graduates." The girls said their parents met at Marshall when they were both going to school, and now that they both attend Marshall, they feel like they are continuing on what has become a family tradition.

"Just knowing we have all been here for Marshall makes it so much more of a sense of pride that Marshall also has," Mary Bunten said. "I know our parents are proud to be Marshall students, so it's exciting for us to do together."

Auditions are held every year for people who want to perform in the band. For information, contact graceb405@live.marshall.edu.

The sisters said this was the perfect way to start and end their college careers, and they wouldn't have had it any other way.

I hate that this is her last year; but I am glad that my freshman band season could be spent with my best friend," Grace Bunten said.
